About CV Road

Dear Editor:

This is a rather belated response to the article in your March 29 issue regarding the Carmel Valley Road and the number of accidents on it.

It should not be a great surprise to anyone that a speed limit of 55 miles per hour on this road is conducive to many accidents. This is the speed limit on a freeway, and I cannot understand the thinking that says the Carmel Valley Road needs the same speed limit as a freeway because "lowering the speed limit on the road is considered an ineffective way to reduce accidents," and "lowering speed limits will not solve the accident problem because there will always be people who drive over the limit. When a certain percentage violates the law, it is not a good law."

With such thinking, we shouldn't have any laws at all because a certain number of people aren't going to pay any attention to them. The only thing is, such conduct endangers the lives of other people. If these too-fast drivers only killed or maimed themselves, it would be okay; however, other people need to be protected which is why we have laws in the first place.

I have thought for a long time that the speed limit on the Carmel Valley Road and the Salinas-Monterey Highway should be 45 miles per hour. The fact that there are so many rear-end collisions shows that people are going too fast and too close to allow those who have a right to, to turn at their own homes or come out of their driveways. This can also be attributed to rudeness and disregard for other people and their rights.

Granted, there probably are a number of slow, older drivers on Carmel Valley Road, but the chances are they have paid a lot more money into building and maintaining the road than younger people so why should they not have rights too?

If they are made to drive 55 when they don't feel able to do so, they also can contribute to accidents or near accidents. Slowing everyone down to something sensible would make these people feel more comfortable too. And what harm is there in doing that for others? Everyone is going to be older after a while—if he lives long enough. A breakdown of ages involved in accidents might prove enlightening, and I suggest you look into this.

The reasons cited as to why people have accidents sounds to me as if they are mostly caused by too-fast driving for the type of road; hairpin turn, crossing center line, rear-ending cars turning left, spinning out of control on road shoulders, hit broadside while trying to make a left turn, not as alert, drunk drivers, motorists backing out of driveways, narrow stretches of road, blind curves, and views obstructed by trees and buildings.

Let's get some pressure put on the California Highway Patrol for Monterey County or whoever is responsible for setting speed limits and have this one reduced to 45 m.p.h.

Thanks forester

Dear Editor:

Have you noticed how very pretty Carmel's little median parks along the streets are this spring? I don't know when they have looked more colorful, with so many wildflowers—baby-blueeyes, bright California poppies, blue-eyed grass, bright yellow oxalis, and low growing lupine, called blue bonnets in Texas, I have been told. Others I don't kow the names of, also.

These small parks always look nice and add so much to the beauty of Carmel, but this year the city forester's department deserves an extra vote of thanks for scattering all those wildflower seeds.

Health of business is everyone's concern

By AL EISNER

IT LOOKS LIKE the gasoline shortage and the United Airlines strike may accomplish what the City Council has not yet been able to legislate—a reduction in the number of visitors coming to Carmel.

A survey of motel, restaurant and shop owners indicates that business is holding up surprisingly well. Matter of fact, there are some who say (see story starting on page 4) that some travelers are staying over one more night so that they can fill their tanks in the morning before returning home.

When one considers that the radio and television stations in the Bay Area have been warning travelers not to come to the Monterey Peninsula, it is encouraging that the number of visitors has been reduced only slightly.

One of the factors that keeps business moving during the present "off-season" is the large number of conventions and group meetings in Monterey. Most of the convention-goers manage to find their way over the hill to Carmel after they attend their business meetings.

It's a little eerie to find parking spaces in mid-week in downtown Carmel. Yet, many merchants say their volume has not been seriously affected. Steve Jacobs, managing partner of the Carmel Plaza, told us that most merchants at the Plaza (which is responsible for 10 percent or more of all retail sales in Carmel) are holding their own, with sales keeping pace with last year's figures. Allowing for inflation, however, it appears that actual sales are down.

If service station owner Dick Lugo is right, the situation could worsen by the time summer rolls around (see story page 4). His allocation is being cut further.

•

I WON'T SPECULATE on whether the situation is real or imagined and whether it was contrived by the oil companies to boost prices. Although everyone is able to get gasoline most of the time, drivers are inconvenienced by long lines at gas stations. The question of actual vs. imagined supplies is secondary to how motorists actually react to all the publicity.

So far, they seem to be taking it calmly. Carmel motels report few cancellations, and solid bookings for weekends.

If the much-publicized shortage has a serious effect on the volume of business, tax revenues will fall. When the City Council has to curtail services or raise taxes to make up the difference, then, perhaps, some who are rubbing their hands with glee will awaken to the fact that the economic health of our business district is a concern of every citizen of this fair village.

View through a Grapestake Fence

"SUCH STUFF AS DREAMS ARE MADE OF"

I had a dream the other night. I was walking drift-aly through the mist, with the candle-glow lights shining through the trees. All the houses looked warm and smiley, tucked beneath their pine needle covers in their grapestaked poster beds. The new-growth flowers were drinking in the mist, making nectar for the morning's hummingbirds.

The waves in Carmel Bay sang a lullaby: "Shush, shush, my little town. Shush, my little town, sleep," with the rhythm of a rocking mother. And the mist seemed to move back and forth, back and forth, in time to her song.

A 'possom peeked at me from his high perch, eyes like teacups, never blinking, even when Grandfather Raccoon lumbered across the street, grumbling about his grubs. He looked at me and chattered briefly, without pausing. I replied, "good evening," and tipped my cap, wishing him a hearty appetite in someone else's yard.

The eucalyptus smell was strong, clearing my head with its vapors, until each breath was almost painful. But I smelled new things as I passed each house. This one smelled of resin, left from music practice. That one had a new-turned garden, ripe with worms. Linseed oil and paint drifted from artists' homes. A warm, milky, new puppy smell came from a little girl's bedroom window.

Grease paint and cold cream told of rehearsals for a play. Wet wool, drying, carried the accomplishment of a new needlepoint from some talented fingers. Sawdust, slightly damp, and the rust forming on a forgotten hammer testified to an almost-finished project.

Uptown, the smells and sounds bounced about the mist. Candy and coffee, burlwood and stuffed bears. A music box playing itself to rest. "Tock, tock, tick, bong," came from the clock shops. Scented candles and crepes mingled, not unpleasing.

The mist moved away, floating off like a chiffon scarf moving with a beautiful woman's exit, and looking up, I saw the stars crisply staring before the moon's rise over the hill.

Carmel was asleep. Quiet and resting. Full of the day's activities, the evening's enjoyments. The day's few frowns were washed away in the moonlight, leaving a peaceful countenance, restoring itself for the morrow.

Ah, but my dream is a reality.

AH HA! THE FAT'S IN the fire and the goose is almost cooked!

By law (the Brown Act of 1953), local governments may not have secret or unannounced meetings, and a majority of city councilmen (three) cannot discuss city matters outside of an announced council session.

That means that in no way may any three members of our council meet anywhere without violating the Brown Act.

SCENE: Three separate phones. One councilman on each.

BROWN: "Hello, Gunnar? Mike here. What's your schedule for today?"

NORBERG: "Well, I have post office at 10:30; savings bank at 10:45; the planning commission scold at 11; Tuck Box at 12:15; a tour of ..."

BROWN: "Hold it! Is Helen or Howard going to be at the Tuck Box? I was taking a friend there today. Les is selling part of downtown at lunch, so he won't be there."

BRUNN: "I have lunch in my hammock today, but I don't know what Helen's doing. But 10:30 is my hour for the post office, Gunnar. We agreed to that last week!"

NORBERG: "I can't help it! Les had a dentist appointment and had to move his time up. But I wish you'd stop eating there, Howard, the birds aren't getting the crumbs. And everytime I walk past with Mike or Les, we're close to violation. Why don't you eat at your desk like everyone else?"

BROWN: "Hold it, boss. You sat in the row behind me at Sunset on Tuesday night, and with Helen's season seat just in front of me, I couldn't even applaud, I was so nervous."

BRUNN: "We can't go on not meeting like this. I suggest that if any of us see each other, we cross the street."

BROWN: "For Pete's sake! I've been doing that all week! I'm getting dizzy with all the zig-zags."

NORBERG: "We could just put up our daily schedules on the post office board, and then take our chances. If anybody sees any of us together, we could just say that it's posted. I'll check it out with Brehmer."

BROWN: "Okay. But ask him if he wants to make a fourth for bridge Friday night."

BRUNN: "My place or yours?"

NORBERG: "Les'. It's his turn."

Curtain.

THANKS TO A large-sized peanut butter jar, Ben's School Fund is now a fact. Official, even to a bank number.

The peanut butter jar (an appropriate interim place, if there ever was one), was full of coins, bills and checks, already donated, and it traveled to the bank to make the opening deposit, and traveled back home again with a savings account deposit book tucked inside. Bookkeeping records will be kept in a more official method, but I thought it was a good start. Creamy, not chunk.

And by the way, don't forget to send your check!

Jacobs says rent controls would create problems, not solve them

The following letter, in slightly different form, was sent to the Carmel City Council by Steve Jacobs of San Francisco. Mr. Jacobs, an attorney, is also the managing partner of Carmel Plaza in downtown Carmel.

Mayor Gunnar Norberg
City Hall
P.O. Box CC
Carmel-by-the-Sea, CA 93921
Dear Mayor Norberg:

The city can address specific problems involving the loss of retail services and rent gouging directly. You need not resort to broad legislation affecting 100 percent of the property owners and tenants when the problem probably pertains to less than 2 percent.

The city does not need to invest thousands of dollars in developing legislation, fighting litigation and instituting new bureaucracies to deal with the problem involving relatively few people. In this letter I will identify the specific problems currently confronting the city, examine the consequences of Carmel legislation and suggest some reasonable solutions.

WHAT IS THE PROBLEM?

The first question the city must answer (hopefully in the council chamber rather than in court): What is the legitimate interest of the city, requiring governmental action, in curtailing the rights of commercial landlords and tenants to contract with each other? Certain types of retail services—laundries, cleaners, shoe repair stores, tailors, markets—have been identified by the city already as services the city of Carmel wants to continue doing business in the downtown commercial area.

There is a feeling, evidently, among the City Council that (1) a substantial number of these services have been leaving the city and as a result (2) there is the immediately foreseeable danger that there will be an insufficient number of these services remaining in the city to serve the residents of Carmel. This may or may not be true. It would not be difficult to determine the extent to which the problems, in fact, exist.

Assuming that there is the immediate danger of insufficient services being available to the residents of Carmel, then the city should address the specific problem of keeping the services within the city limits. The city must recognize that it does not have a legitimate interest in a specific service being rendered in the past.

The second problem that City Council members have identified as something that should be addressed by city law is "rent gouging." There is the serious question as to whether or not the city should redress the problem of commercial landlords receiving what it believes to be excessive profits from their buildings while at the same time not addressing the problem of tenants and other people receiving excessive profits from their businesses.

Since the city does choose to address the problem of rent gouging, it is important that there be some determination of when, in fact, "rent gouging" occurs. When there is an agreement on what constitutes "rent gouging" and how often it occurs, the matter might be dealt with in a reasonable way.

WHAT ARE EXAMPLES OF THE PROBLEM?

To understand the two problems the city wishes to deal with through legislation, (1) the loss of needed retail services in Carmel and (2) rent gouging, let us consider the following example: Let us suppose there are three adjacent stores on Mission Street which are essentially the same size and desirability. Let us further suppose that the fair market value for each store is $400 per month.

In the first store is Sam Shoemaker, who has a shoe repair shop, and pays $125 per month in rent. In the second store is Tim Tailor, who has a tailor shop, and pays $500 per month. In the third store is Gloria Giftgiver, who has a gift shop, and pays $500 per month.

The building containing the first store is owned by Wilma Widow, who lives off the income. The owner of the second two shops is the wealthy George Gouger. The city of Carmel now institutes rent control and prohibits changes in uses.

WHAT ARE THE RESULTS OF CARMEL LAWS?

(a) Fair market value of $400 is established by what new tenants would pay in locations based upon comparable rents in the city. We see that Tim Tailor is being "gouged" or compelled to pay a higher than fair market rent. Existing tenants are susceptible to being forced to pay more than the fair market value because of the high cost of moving equipment and setting up business in another location.

(b) Gloria Giftgiver in the above example could easily move to another location at market rent and doesn't need protection, for either the service she is rendering or her possible lack of knowledge and sophistication about rents in Carmel.

(c) The prohibition against an increase in rent does nothing towards keeping Tim Tailor from being gouged.

(d) The prohibition against a change in use does nothing to provide Tim Tailor with an affordable location in town.

(e) A 100 percent increase in Sam Shoemaker's rent in the above example would not result in rent gouging because his rent would still be about half the fair market value rent. On the other hand, a permissible 5 percent increase in Tim Tailor's rent would be city sanctioned rent gouging because the landlord would be getting more rent because of the existing tenant's circumstance than he could get from any new tenant.

(f) The legislation rewards George Gouger in the above example for his past gouging policies by giving him the opportunity to increase his rent by $50 per month. It penalizes Wilma Widow in the above example for her restraint by allowing only a $12.50 per month rental increase.

(h) If Sam Shoemaker and Wilma Widow wanted to agree to execute a lease with $200 a month rent, half the fair market value, they could not do so.

(i) The reason Sam Shoemaker's rent might have been so low is that he could have entered into his lease 10 or 20 years ago and the term is just coming to an end. The city legislation has the effect of holding Wilma Widow's rent to the fair rent that she negotiated possibly 10 or 20 years ago.

(j) The city will not be able to force George Gouger to only rent to a service use because no service use may be willing to pay fair market value in his location. The city certainly could not without violating his legal rights require George Gouger to lower his rents below the fair market value in order to find somebody who will put a service in his location.

(k) The city has created the right for Sam Shoemaker to pay less than a third of the fair market value rent for his location.

(l) The city has permanently required Wilma Widow to charge less than one-third of the fair market value for her building.

(m) Gloria Giftgiver might be paying $500 because it is 10 percent of the monthly gross on a percentage rental lease which expired. She would be given a windfall by the city ordinances if her sales increased 20 percent and her rental, 10 percent of sales, which would otherwise increase 20 percent, will be reduced from 10 percent to 9.2 percent of sales.

(n) If Gloria Giftgiver moved out, the new law would provide a positive incentive not to rent to a service related use and forbid a book or apparel use.

There is no difensible city interest in bringing about any of the above results.

WHAT HAPPENED IN CARMEL?

Let us assume the Wilma Widow building in the above example was sold. The new landlord came in and charged Sam Shoemaker $1,100 a month rent. The city responded with laws affecting all the other landlord-tenant relationships in the city.

WHAT COULD CARMEL HAVE DONE?

(1.) The city could provide for the expenditure of a few thousand a year to assist retail services to relocate within Carmel. The cost of a few thousand dollars to maintain the services would be infinitesimal next to the bureaucratic cost of enforcing rent control—let alone the tens of thousands of dollars of cost involved in formulating the legislation and litigating it.

(2.) The city could provide that when (1) an endangered service tenant had a lease for more than a year which ended and (2) the landlord wanted to increase the rent to the fair market value or more and (3) this is substantially more than the increase in the cost of living over the term of the lease, the landlord would be obligated to contribute a sum of money towards the relocation of the service within the city of Carmel. (The amount of money required to be contributed should relate to the actual relocation costs and to the capitalized value of the difference between rent increased in accordance with the cost of living and the higher fair market value which resulted from a change of circumstance in the location or the economy or the neighboring stores.)

(3.) If a retail service, which the city determined needed protection, was faced with Sam Shoemaker's new situation, the city could require arbitration to determine the fair market value as maximum rent. This would have the effect of reducing Sam's new rent from $1,100 down to $400.

(4.) The city could allow the use or conversion of second-story space to retail service space. Second-story space would be fine for most services and charge appropriately low rent.

(5.) The city could provide for new construction (1) more allowable retail square footage or (2) more living units or (3) less parking in exchange for an agreement to provide a minimum percentage of the new construction devoted exclusively to retail services.

ARE CARMEL RESIDENTS HURTING?

The people who live in Carmel can, without leaving town, shop for the widest selection of women's apparel available to people in the state of California between Santa Barbara and San Jose. People of Carmel have a choice of some 70 restaurants where they can buy not only a wide variety of food but food held down to a very competitive price.

Without rental controls, Carmel has developed a wonderful shopping district for its residents which is very attractively maintained. The sales tax revenue has resulted in numerous services not available in other cities with an insignificant city tax assessment.

The laws introduced by the city to control use and rent (1) result in windfalls where the city has no interest in creating windfalls, (2) reduce sales taxes, (3) make businesses less competitive, (4) cause innumerable hardships and (5) do not address the problem which the city has stated to exist.

Swain changes mind, will accept re-appointment

CARMEL MAYOR Gunnar Norberg will win one and lose one when the Carmel City Council meets Monday evening for its first regular meeting of May.

He will win back Sandy Swain for a second term on the Carmel Planning Commission. Miss Swain confirmed that in an interview with the Pine Cone on Monday.

But Norberg will lose his dream of a new mayor's office at City Hall. An architect has recommended that a small, back room that now houses a copy machine, be converted into a new mayor's office.

•

MISS SWAIN said Norberg has convinced her to accept a reappointment to the Planning Commission.

"It would put the commission in one heck of a jam right now if I didn't accept," she said Monday.

The commission is already short one member, caused when Eileen Thompson quit last month.

Norberg indicated he is not prepared to fill Mrs. Thompson's vacant post. But he did confirm that he intends to reappoint Miss Swain on Monday. She is a firm Norberg supporter.

Two weeks ago Miss Swain told the Pine Cone she had "doubts" about accepting the reappointment. "But with Eileen gone, I think it's important I stay," she said Monday.

•

NORBERG'S PROPOSAL to extend a new mayor's office out from the northwest wing of the finance department was discouraged in an architect's report.

"Extending over the existing drive ... requires an access corridor which renders the present finance office useless," Olof Dahlstrand, the architect, said in a report to the council.

Dahlstrand, a former councilman who is familiar with City Hall, has recommended that the new office be located in a room where a duplicating machine is presently stored.

A "simple solution," is what Dahlstrand called it.

Besides, it could save the city thousands of dollars in construction costs.

Norberg stated displeasure with that suggestion, when contacted Monday.

"I doubt it will work ... I thought we could just extend out a bit," he said.

Norberg relinquished the previous mayor's office more than one year ago to Douglas Peterson, the city finance director. He has had no office since that time.

"We top dogs are excluded from privacy ... I don't even have a place (at City Hall) to get a hold of a phone," Norberg complained. Norberg specified that any mayor—not just himself—should be entitled to office space.

The Village:

Business is good in Carmel despite gasoline problems

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

BUSINESS IS BOOMING in Carmel despite—or perhaps because of—the gasoline pinch.

Merchants in the gift, restaurant and motel business were sometimes embarrassed to admit that their sales have jumped anywhere from 15 to 25 percent over the same period a year ago.

Explained one merchant: "Carmel is virtually recession-proof, depression-proof and gas rationing-proof."

No doubt, fewer people are visiting Carmel. Gasoline worries have cut into the numbers of tourists who flock here.

"Sure, the numbers are down," agreed Carmel Police Chief William Ellis. "But this town is always so busy, it's difficult to tell how much we've lost," he said.

Despite optimistic merchants, the owner of Carmel's largest service station said everyone will feel the squeeze by July, when his modest allocation may force him to limit fill-ups to 10 gallons. His gasoline service hours have already been cut in half.

IT MAY SAY "VACANCY," but most Carmel motel owners interviewed said they had fewer vacant rooms this April than last year. More guests are staying Sunday evenings, so they can depart when gasoline is available on Mondays, owners said. (David Eaton photo)

MERCHANTS BAFFLED by an unusually strong April—even with gasoline playing hide and seek—offered these explanations:

- Tourists who visit Carmel during the gasoline pinch are not window shopping. Their income is generally above average and they have come to purchase expensive items.
- Carmel is in an ideal location. Many visitors can get to Carmel and back from their homes on a single tank of gasoline.
- During the gasoline squeeze, some overnight visitors are staying through Monday, instead of driving back on Sunday when most service stations are closed. That helps business.
- With the volume of visitors down, merchants can spend more time with customers. They can answer questions, chat, and even pressure patrons into making the big buy.
- Once tourists get to Carmel, they can park their cars and forget them, because Carmel motels and shops are bunched together.
- Tourists are taking a "last fling" before dwindling gasoline supplies force them to stay home this summer.
- Gasoline conscious tourists are taking the short hop to Carmel instead of the long haul to Yosemite or Lake Tahoe.
- Gasoline or no gasoline—tourists will get here.

•

"THE BETTER QUALITY Carmel stores are actually benefitting from this because we're not overrun with the daytime San Jose tourist who comes here, buys a hamburger, then goes home," said Howard Brunn, the councilman and owner of Carmel Bay Company.

Sales are up 11 percent from last April at his store, Brunn said. "At this point, I'm not at all worried about gas. Matter of fact, it's rather refreshing to be able to walk around town," Brunn said.

"If anyone had told me we'd have this kind of business, I'd have said they were nuts," remarked David Hughes, owner of David's.

Visitor traffic in his store is down 50 percent, but sales have zoomed 20 percent from last April, Hughes said. "We're getting the better kind of tourist. Instead of the sightseers who buy two ice cream cones and some beer, people are staying a few days and buying," Hughes said.

Fewer customers means merchants can offer better service, Hughes pointed out. "It gives us a chance to talk with the people, instead of watching for the shoplifters and tire kickers," Hughes said.

•

RESTAURANT OWNERS aren't complaining, either.

"People make it up here one way or another. I'm 17 percent ahead of last year," remarked Charles Ober, owner of Charlie O's. That rise is not affected by menu price increases, because there have been none since last April, he said.

Business will continue to boom up to 25 percent this summer, "even with the so-called gas shortage," Ober predicted.

"You can't get a good American down," Ober stated. "He will get gas one way or another."

Nor can you get a good restaurant owner down. The gasoline shortage hasn't hurt Flaherty Swanston, who said business at Flaherty's Fish Market is up 25 percent over last April.

Although Easter weekend "could have been better," Swanston said, "business is not going to be as bad this summer as people think."

•

THE HARBINGER restaurant at Carmel Plaza "has not been affected" by the gasoline squeeze, according to David Hakim, the manager.

The number of dinner customers is about 10 percent higher than last April, but Hakim credits the new early dinner specials for the increase. He also noted that some large private parties were scheduled there last month.

"On the average we have not been hurt. At least, not yet," he stated.

Business at Simpson's has "not really" been hurt during the gasoline pinch, according to manager Robert Little, Jr.

Lunchtime business is down about 5 percent, but dinner business is up about 3 percent, he estimated.

•

CARMEL MOTEL OWNERS say their rooms are full. Some contend business has never been better.

"I'm surprised it's been so good," said Graeme Mackenzie, co-owner of the Sandpiper Inn. Mackenzie is president of the Carmel Innkeepers Association.

Room occupancy is up 20 percent at the Sandpiper from last April, Mackenzie said. "Many visitors are staying that extra day. They leave on Monday instead of Sunday," he explained.

"We're in damn good shape," agreed Bud Allen, owner of La Playa Hotel. "We're running ahead of last year," he said, although he would not state the percentage increase.

The number of "drop-in" guests is down, he noted. Those are guests who decide to take a room at the spur of the moment.

Business, however, is up, he said. "Once they get here, people know they don't have to drive. They can park their cars for the weekend and walk," said Allen.

The 55-unit Jade Tree Inn has "not yet felt" effects from the spotty gasoline supply, according to owner Hank Fonseca.

"We're about the same as last year. But it would be impossible to do a lot more, because we're over 90 percent occupied year round," Fonseca explained.

"To this point it has been more an annoyance than anything else," he said. There have only been a few weekend cancellations at the Jade Tree, he said.

•

THE OWNER OF one of Carmel's largest art galleries says the bad publicity on the local gasoline situation may have hurt his business.

"People are hesitating to come here," said Johan Zantman, owner of Zantman Art Galleries. But the nature of the art sales business "is not to count heads," he pointed out. "A month can be good with only 10 sales," he explained.

Two exclusive gift shop owners suggested that business would be way down at those shops dependent on high volume tourist trade. They were wrong, in at least one case.

"Our April sales are up 25 percent," boasted Mary Lawson, owner of Swenson's Ice Cream Parlor on Ocean Avenue. Sunny weekends have helped, she said.

"People come in here to forget their troubles, like gas shortages," she said.

Even the Carmel Plaza is doing just fine.

"Merchants in the Plaza will be the last to be hurt. We attract the tour bus crowd and the walking crowd," said Maggie Hays, the manager.

"If the cars disappear and the tour buses become the only game in town, at least we've got that," said Mrs. Hays.

Gas pinch will get worse by summer, Lugo says

ALTHOUGH CARMEL MERCHANTS sing of soaring profits, a Carmel service station owner said their tunes will change by mid-summer.

"When July rolls around, I'll probably have to enforce 10 gallon limits on fill-ups," warned Dick Lugo, owner of Lugo's Shell on San Carlos and Fifth. The 10-gallon limit was imposed over Easter weekend.

Because of reduced gasoline allocations, Lugo has cut gasoline service hours from 16 to less than eight. The pumps are generally open from 7 a.m. until noon. They re-open at 3:30 p.m., until the daily supply runs out.

"We've got a serious problem here," Lugo said. "If I run out of gas, it's not going to just affect me. The whole community is going to feel it," he said.

Lugo said he has contacted Congressman Leon Panetta to increase his station's gasoline allocation.

•

CARMEL HAD 10 SERVICE stations in 1972, dispensing about 250,000 gallons of gasoline each month. Today the figures have fallen to five stations that sell just 100,000 gallons monthly, Lugo estimated.

That means about 15,000 customers are now going somewhere else each month to fill their gas tanks, he said. As the figure shrinks, the business community will feel it, he speculated.

"The financial hardship felt by the merchants of Carmel could be disastrous," Lugo said in a letter to Panetta.

Lugo has found some support from the business community.

"Please implore for an ease of regulations to permit more gasoline here, so the economy of this area does not have a setback," said Gasper V. Cardinale, president of the Carmel Business Association, in a letter to Lugo.

Lugo joined other petroleum retailers in Washington, D.C., last month, asking congressmen to ease controls on gasoline allocations.

He brought along a letter of support from the city, signed by City Administrator Jack Collins. "The transfer of allocations to gas stations no longer in business must be shared with those that have survived, if local residents are to receive gasoline for essential trips to the grocery store, doctor, etc.," Collins said in the letter.

•

MEANWHILE, CARMEL POLICE and Fire departments are baffled over how to handle the Saturday morning traffic jams outside Lugo's station.

The lines for gasoline begin to form at 6:30 a.m., according to one attendant. Some customers lock their cars and return when the station opens, he said.

Fifteen more cars are usually waiting, estimated Carmel Police Chief William Ellis. "It's not the easiest thing in the world for us to handle," he said.

Traffic along Fifth Avenue between San Carlos and Mission is limited to service station customers, on Saturday mornings. "As long as the gas situation remains tight, we'll continue this rerouting," Ellis said.

Track meet May 19

Students in grades 4-8 will have a chance to compete in the second annual Kiwanis-Lions Track Meet co-sponsored with the Carmel Unified School District on May 19.

Students at all Carmel schools and all private schools on the Monterey Peninsula are eligible to participate, according to high school vice principal Nick Nicholson.

Interested students can ask their teachers to sign them up for the meet or contact Jay Criddle or Clyde Klaumann at Carmel Middle School.

Open to both boys and girls, the meet will feature long jump and high jump competition in all age groups.

Race events for fourth through sixth grade will include 50, 100, 330 and 660 yard runs. Seventh and eighth graders will compete in 100, 200, 440, 880 and mile runs.

There will also be an open two-mile race for sixth through eighth grade boys and girls.

Nicholson said organizers also hope to have several relay races.

All entrants will receive a participation ribbon, with place ribbons awarded to the top six finishers in each event.

Nicholson said he expects more than 100 students to participate.

The meet, at Carmel High School beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday, May 19, is sponsored by the Carmel Host Lions Club and the Carmel Mission Kiwanis Club.

State to review financing May 22

Hatton Canyon Freeway-- again!

By KEN PETERSON

THE HATTON CANYON Freeway will not go away.

Although the Carmel City Council voted unanimously last August to oppose construction of the freeway between Carpenter Street and Rio Road, a proposal to finance the multi-million dollar project will come before the state Transportation Commission on May 22 in Oakland.

The Monterey County Transportation Commission has voted to request state funds for the project and will make a pitch for the money during a public hearing on the 22nd. County Public Works Director Bruce McClain will make presentations on behalf of several county highway projects not included in the tentative five-year construction program prepared by the Department of Transportation (Caltrans).

McClain will ask that $13,440,000 for the "scenic freeway" be included in the commission's 1981-82 budget. This would enable Caltrans to complete environmental studies on the project, acquire remaining rights-of-way, make some design changes and, eventually, build the 2.3-mile road.

•

THE FREEWAY, seen as the solution to growing traffic congestion problems along Highway 1 on Carmel Hill, would be a limited access four-lane road. It would replace the present two-lane Highway 1 route up the hill with a new roadbed in Hatton Canyon directly to the east.

The project would involve freeway interchanges at Carmel Valley Road and Carpenter Street, and a grade separation at Rio Road.

(A grade separation project involves one road passing over another. The separation is needed to minimize the steep climb up Hatton Canyon from Rio Road to Carpenter Street. Using the current road design, the upward climb would begin at Rio Road by building an artificial grade rather than letting the road follow the flat contours of the land until it rises sharply at the north end of Hatton Canyon.)

Carmel City Manager Jack Collins was unaware of the county transportation commission's recommendation or the May 22 hearing until contacted by this newspaper last week.

But, he said, the item will be on the council's May 7 meeting agenda for comment.

The council went on record last August in opposition to anything but a two-lane road up Hatton Canyon.

•

MAYOR GUNNAR NORBERG believes that if any money is requested for the project, it should be alocated only after there is "no longer the potential for it to be made into a high-speed freeway."

"All developers, big and small, want to get freeways wherever it is possible to put them," he said.

The section of Highway 1 from Carpenter Street to the Carmel River should not be one of those places, Norberg said.

Councilman Howard Brunn said he believes city and county officials should "pow wow" on the issue.

But as long as Hatton Canyon is planned as a freeway, he said there are no grounds for agreement.

"I oppose any overpass-underpass at Carmel Valley Road," Brunn said. "That alone gets my hackles up."

•

McCLAIN SAID nothing but a freeway, even a "scenic freeway" can solve the traffic congestion problem at the mouth of the Carmel Valley.

He called Carmel's notion of a two-lane road up the canyon "a waste of money that wouldn't change traffic on Highway 1. It would divide the problem, not solve it."

Two one-way roads up and down Carmel Hill would leave Carmel High School isolated across a state highway, he said, and would create new problems for local residents trying to use the two roads.

The extra driving needed for local residents to head north or south on one-way roads would put more traffic on Highway 1 than there is now, McClain believes.

Without a lot of fill in Hatton Canyon to reduce the grade, the road will be "so steep that cars can't make it," he added.

McClain said the freeway interchange at the top of Carmel Hill where Highway 1 and Highway 68 intersect drew the same sort of opposition before it was built.

Now, he said, people "can't remember what it used to look like."

Sure, he said, there would be "scars for a while. But they will heal over with proper landscaping."

"We'll have to put up with the uglies for a while until the landscaping takes over," McClain commented.

The continued opposition of Carmel to the project "sure doesn't help" in the bid for funding the road, he said, since the state would rather spend its limited money where people want freeways rather than get "bricks in the head" from local opponents.

•

BUT, McCLAIN ADDED, building the freeway is not an issue in which the city has a large voice.

There is a formal agreement between Monterey County and the State of California endorsing the project. Neither the county nor the state has changed its opinion about the necessity of the freeway extension.

McClain said he understands Carmel's opposition, since the situation now brings the freeway "close to the city without bothering it. Why should the city of Carmel care if the cars are backed up to Big Sur?"

22 teachers to get layoff notices

TWENTY-TWO TEACHERS in the Carmel Unified School District will get layoff notices on May 14 unless the district finds some other way to cut the budget before then.

District Superintendent Carl Wilsey said the notices are the "next step in a very unpleasant process' forced on the district because of state timetables for giving notice to teachers that their contracts will not be renewed.

The teachers laid off under the process could be rehired later, Wilsey told trustees at their April 24 meeting.

There are "so many uncertainties" about district financing that he does not know how many of the teachers will actually be let go by the time school opens next fall.

The trustees reluctantly agreed to issue the notices on a 3-1 vote, with board president Clayton Neill casting the one negative vote "just so it won't be unanimous."

Trustee Elizabeth Bell is out of the country until the end of June.

"All four board members feel very uncomfortable about this," Neill said before the vote. "It just shows the position school districts and employees have been put in by the state Legislature."

•

THE LEGISLATURE holds the key to how much money the Carmel district will have for its programs next year.

Bailout money provided by the state is used to make up for property taxes lost to schools last year by the passage of Proposition 13.

But the legislature has not acted on a school finance bill yet and may not until June. This is well past the deadline for issuing layoff notices required under the state education code.

The district budget is based more than 85 percent on employee salaries and benefits. If the trustees do not lay off teachers, they would have fewer options for places to cut the budget if state aid falls short of what Carmel needs to operate its schools next year.

Teachers who will receive layoff notices by May 14 unless the district cancels them include (with the year they came to the district, their subject and their school):

Should Collins retain authority over personnel?

CARMEL CITY ADMINISTRATOR Jack Collins may have to again fight for his job Monday evening.

That is when a Carmel City Council subcommittee report on his job duties is scheduled for council review. It is speculated that the report—assembled by Councilman Mike Brown and Carmel Mayor Gunnar Norberg—may recommend a modification of Collins' personnel authority.

Details of the study were not made available to the Pine Cone early this week. Norberg told the Pine Cone it is "possible" that the report will recommend scaling down the city administrator's hiring and firing powers.

Norberg said he had discussed the proposal with Brown, but they had reached no conclusions by Monday. "We still have to meet on this," Norberg said.

•

ALTHOUGH COLLINS commands strong support from the city staff and Carmel residents, his council support has eroded since he was selected for the post from nearly 500 candidates two years ago.

Collins has challenged the council on many issues. But it was his appointment of a chief building inspector in January that stirred council protest. Norberg and Brown accused Collins of undermining their efforts to restructure the department.

Collins postponed the appointment the day after the stormy Jan. 15 council session. The city has operated without a chief building inspector since that date.

That action came too late, in the eyes of some councilmen. It embarrassed the council. A reduction in the city administrator's powers would avoid a recurrence.

•

BUT IT APPEARED Collins had won out in February. At an emotional council meeting attended by 200 people, a swelling of community support for Collins forced the council to back down. It shuffled his job description question to a subcommittee to which Norberg later appointed Brown and himself.

That subcommittee report may finally be ready Monday evening—nearly three months after the ruckus began.

Contacted Monday, Collins said he still believes the city administrator should have personnel authority. But he speculated that the subcommittee is now reviewing "bigger things," than just his hiring and firing powers.

Unless there is a change in council philosophy, however, it appears Brown and Norberg will fail to sway council support their way.

Councilmen Howard Brunn and Helen Arnold have both voiced solid support for Collins. Councilman Leslie Gross—who holds the swing vote—confirmed in February that he believes Collins should retain his personnel authority.

•

IN A RELATED matter, the council is also scheduled to review a revised proposal by Collins to restructure the building and planning departments.

Both departments would be supervised by a single "director of development control," under the plan. Presented to the council in February, the proposal was returned to Collins for more work.

The council also asked Collins to eliminate one of the recommended positions. The new scheme would add one employee to a department that now has five people. The original Collins plan would have added two employees.

WHAT'S HAPPENING AT CARMEL HS

By JENNIFER MacLELLAN

"The bigger the lie the better," says Lillian Hellman of her play, The Children's Hour. Lies are exactly what The Children's Hour is about, the lies that destroy two women's lives and the world they have created.

Carmel High School will present this gripping, tense drama Friday and Saturday, ... May 11-12. The critically acclaimed play is drama in every sense of the word.

The play concerns the deception and blatant lying of a 12-year-old girl, who manipulates and eventually destroys everyone around her. Mary Tilford, played by Katie Leonard, controls all the children around her at the boarding school where she lives. The women who run the school, played by Carol Bialek and Holly Simpson, try to reason with her to stop her deception. This only causes Mary to invent the biggest lie she has ever made, a lie pointed at the women and aimed to destroy them.

Mary convinces her grandmother, played by Therese Lee, that her story about the women is the truth. The rumor is overblown and spread all over the school and town until no one is sure what is true—not even the women themselves.

The cast also includes Tom Finklang, Tiffany Grant, Jennifer MacLennan and Rhet Topham, and as the girls at the school, Jamie Awamleh, Caroline Green, Denise Rosburg, Sara Saxby, Alicia Tao and Shelly Zorbas.

Curtain will be at 8 p.m.; cost of tickets is $2 for adults and $1 for students. Reservations can be made by calling the high school between noon and 4 p.m.; tickets may also be purchased at the door. Due to the nature of the subject matter, it is recommended that children not attend.

Bay School 100th year

Bay School will celebrate its 100th anniversary with Bay Day festivities on Saturday, May 12 from 11 a.m.-3 p.m.

Planned events will include a puppet show, games, a prize drawing and performances by a mime, at Bay School on Highway 1 two miles south of Carmel.

The school, now a parent co-op nursery and day care center, was founded in 1879 by the whalers who lived at Point Lobos. It served as an eight-grade elementary school until the Bay District was annexed to the Carmel Unified School District in 1952.

COLLINS TEACHES WORKSHOP

When it comes to running small cities, it seems Carmel City Administrator Jack Collins can tell the other fellows how. Or, at least, he can tell the other fellows how to tell the other fellows how.

Last week Jack was the co-leader of a one-day workshop in small cities management training. The workshop instructed city managers in how to teach their city staff members to run their city; managers from the western states were instructed in both content and teaching methods for presenting the training back in their home towns. Jack has taught the same material in courses for the University of Oregon.

Last week's meeting, in Seattle, was sponsored by the International City Managers Association, a professional association of city managers. It also included a two-day session on council-manager relations.

Carmel schools may offer summer programs

THE CARMEL SCHOOL DISTRICT may offer a limited summer school program this year if arrangements can be made before June.

District Superintendent Carl Wilsey told school trustees last week that he will investigate several alternatives and report to the May 8 board meeting.

Most promising among the options would be a joint summer school program with the Pacific Grove Unified School District.

Pacific Grove already has decided to operate a summer school program through the city's recreation department, Wilsey said.

Fees would be charged to students in the program.

Wilsey was uncertain whether the program would offer academic courses or if it would be recreational only.

The state allows school districts to charge for recreational programs but not for academic courses.

But, Wilsey said last Wednesday, "Who would complain? I don't know. Would there be penalties? I doubt it."

•

SUMMER SCHOOL became a possibility when the private American Learning Corp. offered to lease classroom space from the Carmel district, provide its own teaching materials, hire Carmel teachers and conduct a summer school program of its own this year.

But Wilsey and the trustees were skeptical of the plan because of the high cost per pupil for the five-week program. Tuition would be $144 per student, with a 20 percent discount for the second child in the same family.

Principal Dan Stevenson of Carmel High said the corporation's offer would give district teachers summer work at $40 per day and offer parents an option besides using summer schools offered by private schools on the Monterey Peninsula.

But Trustee Pamela Smith commented: "The whole thing turns me off."

She feared the program might compete with summer offerings by local groups other than the private schools.

Piccadilly Nursery closes; city negotiates to buy property

THE CITY OF CARMEL has gained some headway in attempts to purchase the Piccadilly Nursery on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh.

"I think we've made some progress," confirmed City Administrator Jack Collins Tuesday morning. Collins and City Attorney George Brehmer are negotiating for the property.

Although 17-year tenant Raymond Narvaez has received a May 1 eviction notice, owner Mary Lou Linhart revealed Tuesday that her attorney is "in the midst of delicate negotiations" with the city. Thomas Hawley, a former Carmel planning commissioner, is representing Mrs. Linhart and her brother, George Linsley.

An owner of a Carmel real estate firm estimated the value of the property at $250,000 to $300,000. It is not known how much the owners are asking or what the city has offered for the land.

Collins confirmed that he had discussed the land purchase Monday with both Hawley and Brehmer.

"We haven't purchased it yet, but the owners are in limbo. They can't develop it until the council approves their proposal. Until then, it just sits there," Collins stated.

•

OWNERS HAD PROPOSED to develop a shopping mall with six shops on the site. In an unusual move, the Carmel Planning Commission sidestepped action on the proposal earlier this year, by passing the use permit application forward to the Carmel City Council.

When it reached the council in February, councilmen considered classifying the property as "significant open space," as a way to stall development. Owners complained that would be unfair. At that point, Councilman Howard Brunn suggested the city purchase the property.

The 4,000-square-foot lot and adjoining structure has been a nursery for nearly 40 years. It is one of the last remaining parcels of open space in the city's business district.

The project has still not been approved by the council. That approval is unlikely, unless the city fails in its negotiations.

It would be the city's first land purchase since 1973, when it acquired the 15-acre Flanders property adjacent to Mission Trail Park.

ALTHOUGH 97 percent of the 271-acre Rancho Canada Golf Club would be maintained in open space, opponents of the proposed 175-room Rancho Canada Lodge still don't like the project (see story below). The present clubhouse can be seen at left center. Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula is below, right. The Hacienda Carmel retirement community is at upper left. Use permit hearing Wednesday:

Marriott is out of Rancho Canada

THE PROPOSED Rancho Canada Lodge in Carmel Valley will have no connection with the Marriott hotel chain, a lodge spokesman announced this week.

Nick Lombardo, president of Rancho Canada de la Segunda Inc., said Marriott's withdrawal from the 175-room hotel project is now a certainty.

"I have it in writing," he told this paper Monday.

According to Lombardo, the nationwide hotel chain was interested in the hotel at the west end of the Rancho Canada golf course in Carmel Valley when it was the 376-room facility proposed originally.

The corporation is not interested in having a smaller hotel in the chain, he said.

A use permit hearing for the hotel is scheduled next Wednesday, May 9 at 7:45 p.m. before the Monterey County Planning Commission.

Lombardo said there will be more cooperation between the golf course and hotel management in the day-to-day operation of the hotel, if it is approved, than originally planned.

While he would not say so directly, he indicated the golf course operators may also run the hotel.

"The present management of Rancho Canada will be right there," Lombardo said. "We're not selling anything."

•

THE GOLF COURSE land is leased by Rancho Canada de la Segunda Inc. from the Oppenheimer estate. The Oppenheimers also own the Rancho San Carlos property on the south slope of Carmel Valley between Rancho Canada and Robinson Canyon.

The hotel would be financed by the Winthrop-Carmel Inc. investment group, formerly headquartered in Maryland but now moving its offices to Carmel.

Lombardo emphasized again that no other private courses on the Monterey Peninsula function without some form of development on the property, whether a hotel, condominiums or homes.

"The golf course operations, without additional revenue from commercial areas—either housing or a lodge—are in jeopardy," Lombardo said.

Coalition, property owners to fight Rancho Canada Lodge

REDUCING THE PROPOSED Rancho Canada Lodge to 175 rooms and ending its association with the Marriott hotel chain has not changed the opinions of the project opponents.

They still claim its negative environmental effects are too great and will ask the Monterey County Planning Commission on May 9 to reject a use permit for the hotel.

Stanley Worth, president of the Carmel Area Coalition, said the group still believes the roads at the mouth of Carmel Valley "will not take that traffic."

"There should be a moratorium until somebody comes up with a plan and implements it to improve traffic conditions," he said.

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association has notified members through its telephone tree of the hearing at 7:45 p.m. in the Board of Supervisors' chambers, Church and Alisal streets in Salinas. And the CVPOA will present a statement in oppositon to the project.

The issues of sewage disposal and traffic volume are key questions the CVPOA wants solved before any hotel is built on the 271-acre Rancho Canada golf course.

Worth said the reduction in the hotel project from 376 rooms originally proposed to the current 175 rooms is "a step in the right direction."

But environmental considerations outweigh any positive points the scaled-down size might have in its favor.

•

NEW TRAFFIC STUDIES prepared by Winthrop-Carmel Corp., the development group, and Rancho Canada de la Segunda, Inc., the golf course operators, indicate that traffic generated by the new Rancho Canada Lodge would be less than half of the load anticipated for the original proposal.

A maximum of 1,055 vehicle trips to the site are projected during weekend peak periods and a maximum of 955 trips during weekday peaks. This would add between 0.5 percent and 3.2 percent to current traffic loads, according to an analysis prepared by engineer John Forristal for the developers.

This falls within the normal fluctuations in traffic load and "could not normally be detected or measured," Forristal said in his report.

Service on all roads serving the hotel would remain at current levels with the exception of the Carmel Valley Road-Carmel Rancho Boulevard intersection, where weekend service quality would decline from level B (stable flow, some congestion) to level C (stable flow with some intermittent but unobjectionable delays during peak hours.)

•

CARMEL MAYOR Gunnar Norberg said his opposition to this and other hotel proposals in the Lower Carmel Valley remains firm.

"The less built for any reasons, the better," he said.

Vet uses acupuncture, divining rod to help cure sick animals

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

YOUR SICK PET may not wait on pins and needles to see Dr. John E. Craige.

But the veterinarian, who now lives in lower Carmel Valley, claims he can help cure many sick animals by sticking long pins into various parts of their bodies.

Craige, 64, is a veterinary acupuncturist. His practice is still subject to scientific and medical scrutiny. He admits that most veterinarians in the area think he is "a quack."

But some clients swear by him. They say he has cured their arthritic dogs or relieved their lame horses.

Surprisingly, acupuncture therapy is condoned by the California Veterinary Medical Association, according to one official there. Even the state Board of Examiners in Veterinary Medicine agrees that acupuncture is legal and a viable form of treatment, according to a board spokesman.

•

ACUPUNCTURE IS nothing new. As a matter of fact, the Chinese may have begun practicing it on humans in the third or fourth century B.C. But it is only in recent years that animals have begun to feel the pinch.

Craige is the only licensed veterinarian to use acupuncture in this area. He has practiced here for 32 years.

Some theorize that acupuncture was dicovered by accident. Ancient Chinese warriors injured in battle by arrows suddenly noticed that long-standing pains disappeared, according to one theory.

How does acupuncture work? Sharp needles of various lengths are inserted into special points of the body. It is said to somehow ease pain or help cure disease.

Acupuncturists theorize that an invisible "cosmic energy" flows throughout the body in 14 invisible channels called "meridians." All disease is linked to interruptions in the flow of this energy, they speculate, and the needles facilitate the flow of that energy.

People and animals share similar acupuncture "points," according to Craige. These points vary from species to species, due to differences in anatomy. These points are where the needles are inserted to help energy flow. The points are located throughout the body, including the head and limbs. The points traditionally number 365, to correspond with the days in the year, according to Acupuncture Therapy, by Leong T. Tan.

•

HOW DOES CRAIGE sense where to stick the two to 20 needles that he places into sick animals?

He uses a divining rod.

It is that rod that has prompted skepticisms amongst fellow veterinarians. Commented one local veterinarian who asked not to be named: "Can you believe that the guy uses a wishing stick?"

Here is how the process works:

Craige examines sick animals by running his left hand up and down the 14 meridians of the body. At the same time, he holds a slender, aluminum divining rod in his right hand. It moves clockwise, then counterclockwise, if any body disorders are sensed. At the point where the divining rod oscillates, needles are placed in the body.

If the divining rod does not shudder, then acupuncture cannot help cure the problem, Craige said.

The one-to-four-inch needles are inserted up to an inch deep into the body. There is no bleeding, according to Craige. The needles are left in place for five minutes to one hour, he said.

The needles stimulate a discharge of the oscillation that is said to interrupt energy flow.

"Nature appears to have goofed," Craige said. He explained that he sees "no good reason" for these oscillations that are "harmful" to the body.

•

ACUPUNCTURE is not a cure-all, Craige pointed out. He combines acupuncture therapy with the more orthodox veterinary practices he has used for more than 32 years.

"I never use acupuncture to the exclusion of other methods," he insisted. "But I have a much better success rate in curing animals when I use it (along with other methods) than when I don't," he stated.

"It really did work," claimed Mrs. Virginia Giles of Monterey, who said her two pet terriers were cured by acupuncture. Both dogs suffered with intestinal disorders for years. Since two sessions with Dr. Craige in January, both dogs have been chipper, she said.

"We tried it as a last resort," said Mrs. Giles. "I can't tell you exactly what happened, but it worked," she said.

She held her dogs during both sessions and said, "there was no pain, no crying."

•

BUT NOT EVERYONE accepts the unusual practice. "Its value is unfounded at this point," contended Dr. Joseph V. Marasco, a 25-year Carmel veterinarian. "I don't say there is no good in it, but most of us (veterinarians) get wry smiles across our faces (when discussing acupuncture)," he said.

Marasco admitted that acupuncture could have a "limited application" in treating lameness. But he said he has never practiced it, "and I don't think I ever will," he said.

Do veterinarians fear that it might work better than their own methods?

"It frightens most vets," said Craige. "No vet in this area is willing to accept this. It's disturbing to them, because it challenges their whole concept of medicine," Craige explained.

Marasco answered that he doesn't fear acupuncture. "We try to keep an open mind ... to guard against tunnel vision. But at the same time, it's not our job to experiment. That should be done at universities," he claimed.

•

THE STATE'S largest veterinary group backs the use of acupuncture.

"It appears there are several conditions under which acupuncture is very useful," said Dr. Arthur D. Newell, an executive director for the California Veterinary Medical Association. More than two-thirds of the state's 3,300 licensed veterinarians belong to that association. Only a handful use acupuncture.

Acupuncture has had "reproduceable results" with lame horses, he said. It has also been proven to help heal "lick granuloma," an ugly wound many dogs suffer after licking their lower legs raw, he said.

"We originally looked at it with great distrust. But people who are responsible members of the organization are using it with good results," said the 26-year veterinarian.

Newell stressed that acupuncture is just one means of treatment, "like a shot of penicillin." He said the organization has "no position gung-ho in favor of it, but neither do we have a negative view." Newell knows Craige and is familiar with his work. He said he had "no question" about Craige's qualifications as a veterinarian.

•

THE STATE'S governing veterinary board takes no firm position on acupuncture. "We do, however, consider it within the framework of the law," said Gary Hill, an executive secretary with the state Board of Examiners on Veterinary Medicine.

The board is mostly concerned about unlicensed vets who practice acupuncture—and no other remedies—on animals.

Although Hill conceded "there is a place" for acupuncture, he would not confirm that the board actually supports its use. "The board has never been given an opportunity to make that assumption, and there is no reason for us to consider it now." He said the existence of a "handful" of practicing veterinary acupuncturists in the state "doesn't justify state regulation, unless it is proven there is real harm to the animals and the public." No harm has yet been proven, he said.

•

CRAIGE RECEIVED his degree in Veterinary Medicine from the University of Pennsylvania in 1937. He practiced for 16 years in Seaside and 16 years in Monterey. Just two years ago he discovered the benefits of acupuncture. "I sold my business so I could concentrate on its use," he said. He now works out of his home.

Craige writes a monthly column on veterinary medicine for Kennel Review, a magazine for dog owners. He has promoted acupuncture in that column. He also supports the use of laetril for curing cancer in pets.

He was influenced, in part, by Wayne Cook, a Carmel Valley water dowser. If the dowsing rod could find underground water, Craige reasoned that it could also sense disease in animals. He claims it can.

Acupuncture works best on inflammatory injuries and allergies. It does not work well on cancer, he said. "It simply

FOR THE BEST results of acupuncture treatment, John E. Craige heats the needle in this horse's flank. The 14-year-old quarter horse, "Buck," was blind in one eye. After 15 treatments, owner R.L. Lannom, who leases ranch property south of Carmel near Point Lobos State Reserve, claims the horse can now see out of that eye. "He can see good enough to kick you," Lannom commented. In Craige's right hand is an aluminum divining rod, which he uses to trace the source of the disease. In his left hand is a "moxa stick," a Japanese heat source similar to a slow burning cigarette. The combination of needles, heat and divining rod will improve the energy flow in the body and quicken the healing process, Craige claims. The horse did not flinch or give any indication it suffered pain during the demonstration. (David Eaton photo)

DANIEL T. HU

Daniel Hu an Eagle Scout

Daniel T. Hu, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chi Chung Hu of Carmel and a student at Carmel High, was presented the Eagle Scout Award and received the Eagle challenge at a ceremony at the Carmel Scout House.

To receive the award, Daniel earned 27 merit badges including 11 specifically required for Eagle Scouts, plus 12 skill awards. he has also completed an Eagle project which requires service to the community.

Daniel entered Scouting in 1972 as a Cub Scout in Carmel Pack 48 and was graduated into Boy Scout Troop 32. When Scout Troop 3 was organized in 1976, Daniel became an instructor and a patrol leader.

Highlights of his Scout leader career include two summers at Pico Blanco Scout Camp, an annual 50-mile hike with the troop in the High Sierras, a canoe trip down the Russian River and ski trips to South Lake Tahoe.

KINDERGARTEN REGISTRATION

Parents residing in the Carmel School District may register children for fall kindergarten classes between May 7 and May 11 at the town and Valley elementary schools, 8 a.m.-4 p.m., and at Captain Cooper 8 a.m.-12 p.m.

A child must be 57 months of age on or before Sept. 1, 1979 in order to be eligible for kindergarten entrance.

Birth certificates and documentary proof of immunization records will be required at the time of registration. Although a child may be registered any time from now until the opening of school, parents are encouraged to register their children during the next two weeks.

allows the body to heal itself by straightening out the energy flow," he explained.

He has practiced acupuncture on dogs, cats and horses. "I tried it on a snake once, but I couldn't get the needle through the skin," he said.

Through the use of acupuncture, he claims to have rid a collie of diarrhea, cured another dog of cataracts, and relieved lameness in horses.

He charges from $50 to $75 per hour for his service, depending on the animal and the service required.

He insists that only trained veterinarians—those who have studied acupuncture—should practice it on animals.

He even uses it on himself occasionally.

He claimed acupuncture "cleared up" in two days a concussion he suffered. "And I use it on myself whenever I get colds," he said.

Does he use it on his family? "No," he replied, "my wife is very, very suspicious of it."

•

THERE IS A "surprising" acceptance of his techniques amongst pet owners, he said. "It's the most harmless practice there is. Even shots hurt more," he stated.

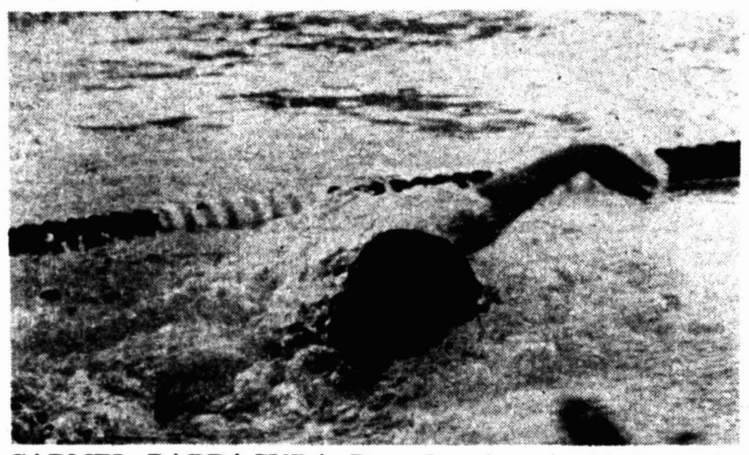
How does he justify the unusual healing methods?

There is nothing unethical, unprofessional or immoral in what I do. I'm doing it after careful study and thorough knowledge of Western medicine," he insisted.

If your animal is sick, Craige is likely to prescribe some medicine. The acupuncture "speeds up the healing process," he said.

Craige admits he is different than most other vets. That doesn't bother him one bit.

"I have an unusual quality," he said, "I want to know everything about everything."



CARMEL BARRACUDA Brett Langley placed first with "A" Time in the 13-14 Boys 100-yard backstroke against Cabrillo at the Carmel High School pool. Brett captured three firsts and three "A" Times in the meet.

Barracudas top Cabrillo

Carmel Barracuda swimmers defeated a strong Cabrillo Threshers team, 476-432, in their first home meet of the season at Carmel High School pool, April 22.

In a hard-fought meet, in which as many as four swimmers achieved "A" times in the same event, the Barracudas captured their first victory over the Threshers since 1966. They racked up one "AA" time, 17 "A" times, and two team records.

Suzy Q. Hermanson captured the double-A time, finishing first at 26.7 and setting a new team record in the 50-yard freestyle. Teammate Beth Allard set the second Barracuda record with an "A" time of 1:17:4 in the 100-yard breaststroke.

Top performer for the Barracuda boys was Brett Langley who scored firsts with "A" times in the 13-14 boys' 50-yard and 100-yard freestyles, and 100-yard backstroke.

Other Barracudas who achieved "A" times were Erica Radon, Andrew White, Amy Buckner, Stacey Wester, Sarah Hicks, and Mike, Katie and Maureen Falge.

High individual scorers by age group were: 6-under, Cassie Griffith and Adam Stiles; 8-under, Sandy Morris and Matt Olin; 9-10, Tanna Franke and Andrew White; 11-12, Stacey Wester and Greg Falge; 13-14, Katie Falge and Mark Reardon; and 15-18, Suzy Hermanson, Beth Allard and Gwen Raddle.

High School sports survive, although seasons are cut

There will be no reduction in the number of high school sports offered next year although the length of the seasons for all sports will be reduced under a proposal accepted by the Mission Trail Athletic League board of managers last month.

The only question still facing the Carmel Unified School District is how to finance its athletic program.

Carmel High Principal Dan Stevenson said booster groups are discussing alternatives to enable continuation of the 17-sport athletic program if the district eliminates funding of athletics.

He said one major source of income might be imposition of fees to students who participate in sports.

"We can't offer credit for athletics, but we can charge a fee," he said.

The amount of the fee would depend on how much money can be raised from sources other than a direct charge to students.

Cost of the programs could amount to $50,000-$60,000, Stevenson said.

As to the sports offerings for the league as a whole, he said there is no danger they will be cut back or eliminated.

"We're worse off than anybody," Stevenson said of Carmel's financial situation. "The rest of the schools are in pretty good shape."

Nonetheless, the board of managers agreed at its April 4 meeting to shorten seasons for all sports so "we could keep as many kids as possible in the program," Stevenson said.

Offerings in the fall will include football (10 games), cross country (10 meets), volleyball (16 games), girls' tennis (15 matches), girls' swimming (12 meets) and water polo (12 meets). Fall football begins Aug. 20 and all other fall sports Sept. 10. Fall seasons end Nov. 16.

Winter sports include wrestling (15 meets), soccer (16 games), boys' basketball (20 games) girls basketball (20 games), and field hockey (16 games). Seasons begin Nov. 19 and end Feb. 16, 1980.

Spring sports will be track and field (13 meets), boys' tennis (15 matches), baseball (20 games), softball (20 games), golf (15 matches) and boys' swimming (12 meets). Seasons begin Feb. 18 and end May 16, 1980.

Schools will offer varsity and frosh-soph teams, Stevenson said. The league will permit a third team—freshman or junior varsity—in any sport if the school wants to field one. but that team would compete independently."

Commission to hear plans for 3 major Valley developments Wednesday

THREE MAJOR Carmel Valley developments, including the reduced-scale Rancho Canada Lodge, come before the Monterey County Planning Commission for use permit hearings next Wednesday.

The commission will review the proposal for a 175-room resort hotel at the west end of the Rancho Canada Golf Course at a 7:45 p.m. hearing.

A proposal by Barbara Mark to build the 46-unit White Oak Condominiums complex in Carmel Valley Village will be aired at 12:10 p.m.

At 7:15 p.m., the commission will review plans to add 27 guest units at Los Laureles Lodge east of the Village.

All three hearings will be conducted in the Board of Supervisors' chambers, Church and Alisal streets, Salinas.

•

THE RANCHO CANADA LODGE would be developed on a 13-acre site on the golf course just east of the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center at Highway 1 and Rio Road.

It is a much-reduced version of the 376-room Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge originally proposed by the developers in 1976.

The new hotel would leave intact all 36 holes on the golf course. Underground parking would be provided for some of the guests. The number of tennis courts would be cut to four, one third of the original number, and swimming pools halved to four, also.

William Sullivan of Winthrop-Carmel Corp., a partner in the project with Rancho Canada de la Segunda, Inc., said the hotel has a completely different orientation than the earlier, much-larger version.

The reduction in size has cost the project its affiliation with the Marriott chain and it will no longer be primarily a convention hotel, Sullivan said. While small groups will still use the facility for meetings, it has become more of a destination resort.

Nick Lombardo, president of the Rancho Canada group which operates the 271-acre golf course, said the hotel would be the only development on the property except for some expansion of the golf course clubhouse.

•

THE WHITE OAK condominiums are the end product of discussions between Mrs. Mark and the planning commission over what type of development should occur on the 10.2 acres of open land in the heart of the Village commercial district.

She originally proposed a 100-unit tennis resort because commission guidelines would not allow residential development.

But Valley residents and the commissioners agreed that condominiums would be preferable to the resort. The density was determined by the land's capacity to handle the septic sewage generated by the units.

The commission must decide on May 9 whether the environmental impact report (EIR) prepared for the resort project is adequate to deal with the effects of a residential complex.

If it is, the commission would consider a use permit for the development south of Carmel Valley Road between Paso Hondo and Esquiline Road at a later date.

The proposal for the condominiums indicates one tennis court and one swimming pool in the development. Commercial and historically significant buildings along the Carmel Valley Road frontage would be maintained in their current uses.

•

LOS LAURELES LODGE proposal would expand the resort at Carmel Valley and Rancho roads to 50 rooms, more than neighbors want and less than either the 94 rooms proposed last spring or the more recent 72-room proposal submitted by the lodge owners.

The commission agreed in March that 50 rooms would be an appropriate size for them to consider. The project covers 9.4 acres of land.

At Wednesday's hearing, the commission will decide if it should order an EIR for the project or again reject it as too large for the surrounding community.

A use permit for the lodge would not be reviewed by the commission until either an EIR or a negative declaration of environmental impact are prepared.

More information about any of the hearings is available by telephoning the planning department in Salinas, 1-422-9018.

Marriott bows out of Rancho Canada

He cited Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club, with more than 200 homes and a 100-room resort lodge for an 18-hole golf course. Rancho Canada is a 271-acre, 36-hole golf course.

"We have here the things we want to have," he said. "We can maintain the greenbelt with the aid and help of a commercial area."

•

LESS THAN 3 percent of the entire golf course area would be devoted to buildings, parking lots and tennis courts and swimming pools, Lombardo said.

Peak hour traffic would not be affected substantially by the lodge because hotel guests and golfers are on the road at different hours than commuters, he said. A new traffic impact survey prepared for the smaller hotel shows that the number of vehicle movements would increase between 0.5 percent and 3.2 percent at any given hour.

The overall amount of traffic generated by the Rancho Canada Lodge would be 46 percent less than under the previous proposal.

Lombardo said in some instances traffic approaching the hotel-golf course complex might decrease because convention groups using the Rancho Canada courses are obliged to stay in Monterey motels because no rooms are available closer to the courses.

The hotel project would create about 175 new jobs and add to local tax revenues through room taxes, sales tax and property taxes, he said.

School district to hire new Middle School principal by end of summer

CARMEL Middle School will have a new principal to replace Bob Hufford before the end of summer, under a hiring timetable approved last week by the Carmel Unified School District board of trustees.

The board on April 24 approved the hiring plan recommended by District Superintendent Carl Wilsey. Hufford left the post last Friday to become superintendent of an elementary school district near Redding.

The proposal came under fire from parents and teachers in the audience, who said the district should not spend time and money recruiting candidates for the post outside the Carmel district.

Wilsey was hooted by the audience at Carmel Middle School library when he said, in response to the complaints, "I would hope, in a district this size, we'd never get locked into a policy of only hiring within the district."

People complained that most administrators are selected from outside Carmel.

Trustee Richard Wilsdon said this is a misconception, citing the principals at Woods, Tularcitos and Captain Cooper schools as examples of promotions within the district.

But one teacher said he was told, when hired eight years ago, the district policy was to promote from within. And, he said, "It just hasn't happened.

"You are saying, 'We don't have the confidence in you that you can do the job,'" he said.

Wilsey said qualified candidates within the district will be encouraged to apply for Hufford's job.

•

WILSDON POINTED out that federal affirmative action hiring standards require the district to offer the job to candidates from other areas. This encourages minority and women applicants to seek the job.

He said there is no way for the district to circumvent this requirement without risking its federal income.

Wilsey said such notice could consist of nothing more than mailing notices to placement offices in California and making a few telephone calls to investigate applicants.

Bruce Stannard, a Middle School teacher and president of the Association of Carmel Teachers, said hiring within the district would save a teacher's job—one who might otherwise be laid off. Promoting a teacher or lower-level administrator would open up a job lower in the ranks to absorb a teacher facing dismissal.

Parent Gail Buche also criticized the selection process. She said parents are not involved in the process. Wilsey has proposed that a screening committee including two parents, a district principal, two teachers, the assistant superintendent and a classified employee review the top five or 10 candidates after he has screened the applications.

Mrs. Buche felt there should be more parent screening.

She also proposed, to a cool reception from the school board, that a student be added to the screening committee. She said students from Middle School and Carmel High have contributed a great deal to discussions by the citizens' committee looking for ways to trim the district budget next year.

Trustee Frances Gaver said students have never before participated in the hiring process for administrators. No other board members commented on the idea but it was not included in the final vote on the hiring procedure.

Applications for the job will close June 1, with Wilsey to select candidates for screening committee review by June 15. The advisory committee will complete interviews between June 20-22. The board and superintendent will interview the top three candidates June 26-28 and the board will choose Hufford's successor July 3.

The new principal would assume his responsibilities between mid-July and Sept. 1.

PADRE SPORTS

By JAY POSNER

THE CARMEL HIGH varsity baseball team moved two steps closer to an undefeated league season by walloping Gonzales High 6-1, and edging Hollister High 4-2.

The two wins, which raised the Padres' Mission Trail Athletic League record to 9-0 and their overall record to 13-3, were paced by the outstanding pitching of Pat Kelly and Greg Raynes, and the timely hitting of Cory Bliesner, Neil Vandervort and John Lucido.

Kelly fired a three-hitter to beat Gonzales, while Raynes worked out of two bases-loaded jams in his win over Hollister.

Bliesner's two-run home gave Kelly all the runs he needed, while Vandervort went three for six with three runs batted in, and Lucido broke out of a long slump by going four for six with one RBI.

Against Gonzales, the Padres scored all their runs in the first three innings, the first two coming on Bliesner's first home run of the year. In the second, Carmel added two more on a walk to Mark Clark, a sacrifice by Mike Matson (who reached first when the throw on his bunt to second was late), and a two-out, two-run single by Vandervort. The Padres' final two runs came on walks to Lucido and Joe Limov, a double steal, an RBI groundout by Matson and an RBI single by Tim Sherman.

The Spartans' only run was unearned, as Kelly surrendered only three hits, while walking but one and striking out eight.

The Padres' ace righthander has not allowed an earned run in his last 20 innings and only four in his last 27 and two-thirds frames for a sparkling 1.01 earned run average.

Kelly's next start after his game last Tuesday with King City High will most likely be next Tuesday, May 8 at Pacific Grove. In between those two games, Raynes or Buz Fulton will face North County High tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 p.m. in Carmel.

•

IN RAYNES' LAST GAME at Hollister, the sophomore raised his record to 6-0 with a clutch performance that dropped the Hay Balers out of the MTAL race.

The Padres again scored all of their runs in the first three innings, tallying once in the first and third innings and twice in the second.

In the opening frame, Dave Spear drew a one-out walk and scored on Vandervort's two-out triple. Carmel's next two runs came when Lucido tripled and scored on a double by Clark. Clark went to third on Matson's single and scored on an error by Ron Acosta.

Carmel's final run came on a single by Vandervort, a stolen base, and Lucido's second straight hit, a single to center.

Hollister's two runs came in the third and sixth, but the real story came when the Balers loaded the bases in the second and fourth innings.

Raynes worked out of the second inning jam by getting two force plays; the hard-throwing righthander escaped the fourth inning by getting two fly-outs with the bases loaded.

Both wins last week were crucial because they gave the Padres a three game lead over Palma High (scheduled to play Carmel on May 11) and a four-game advantage over Gonzales, Hollister, and Pacific Grove with only five games remaining.

•

JUNIOR ART STRUM set two league records to lead the Padres to an 83-point win in the MTAL swimming and diving championship last Saturday at the Carmel pool.

Carmel scored 233 points to 150 for Pacific Grove, 129 for Robert Louis Stevenson School, and 29 for Hollister.

Strum established records in the 100- and 200-yard freestyle races. His 51.0 time in the 100 broke Ward Gillette's 1970 mark by two-tenths of a second and a time of 1:53 topped Warren Lee's 1977 record by a full four seconds.

Junior Mark Baldwin also won a pair of races: the 200 individual medley in 2:09 and the 100 breaststroke with a time of 1:04.4.

Other Carmel winners were Andy Fitton (50 free), Rich Gistelli (diving), the 200-medley relay team of Baldwin, Fitton, Carl Bresk and Bill McCreery, and the 400-freestyle relay squad of Strum, Tom Agan, Mike Lafontaine and Peter Kelly.

Gistelli, Baldwin and freshman Bryan Baldwin will compete in the Central Coast Section Championships tomorrow and Saturday at Stanford University.

•

IN TENNIS ACTION, Carmel remained undefeated in six MTAL matches by routing Gonzales 6-1, and RLS 5-2.

The Padres, who played at Pacific Grove yesterday, will resume Wednesday, May 9 when they host Hollister High at 3:30 p.m.

Jim Heebner, Anthony Galang, and Adam Sherburne all won two singles matches, while Erick Collas, Dan Kennedy and Frank Collas each won one.

In doubles play, Rico deRouen and Tom Robinson defeated Gonzales, while Jan Doelman and deRouen routed their RLS opponents.

•

THE PADRE GOLF TEAM breezed to an easy 321-359 win over Pacific Grove High last Friday at Pebble Beach. John Pirotte was medalist in the 12-hole match with a two-over-par 49, while Mark Robertson fired a 51 and Curtis Jones and Andrew Whittacre shot 52s.

The Padres, now 3-1 in the MTAL, had a showdown with Hollister High (5-1) yesterday at Pebble Beach. Results were not available at press time.

Budget tightening takes toll:

School cuts frustrate staff, board

By KEN PETERSON

THERE IS GROWING frustration among teachers, administrators and school board members in the district about the shrinking budget for Carmel schools.

As a glum-faced school board listened April 24, teachers made an impassioned plea for a two-year, 15 percent wage hike covering 1978-80. Without it, they warned, more teachers will leave the district and the profession, or moonlight at second jobs to support their families.

Board members, meanwhile, feel helpless to do anything about the teachers' salary demands because of the limited money available for district programs.

The Carmel Unified School District will operate within a budget of about $5.9 million for 1979-80, down from $6.2 million this year and $6.8 million in 1977-78.

The Association of Carmel Teachers (ACT) is asking for a 9 percent wage increase next year and a retroactive 6.5 percent hike for the current year, now that a state-imposed ban on salary hikes has been lifted by the California Supreme Court.

Salaries would rise from $10,878 for starting teachers with only a bachelor's degree to $12,568 annually next fall if both increases are approved.

At the top of the salary schedule, a veteran teacher with 12 years experience, a master's degree and extra college credits would earn $24,956, compared with the current $21,977 maximum.

The California School Employees Association (CSEA), representing non-teaching employees, also presented its contract proposal at last week's school board meeting. The CSEA is asking for a 10 percent pay increase next year and a new section in the contract covering layoff procedures.

•

SCHOOL TRUSTEE Richard Wilsdon said his only reaction to the lengthy presentation by teachers was a feeling of helplessness.

"I see total frustration everywhere," he said after the meeting. "I understand how frustrated the teachers feel at this point."

But, he added, the salary request is "totally beyond our ability to pay."

Carmel will receive, at best, a 5 to 8 percent increase in assistance from the state in addition to funds allocated during the current year, he said, "unless the legislature does something that no one anticipates."

Because of the passage of Proposition 13, state bailout assistance now accounts for 75 to 80 percent of the district budget, Wilsdon said. Before Proposition 13, property taxes provided 75 percent of the budget.

The state aid is based solely on attendance (ADA). And enrollment in Carmel schools could be hurt by some of the cuts under discussion to balance the budget next year.

•

A MODIFIED five-period day at Carmel High School and Middle School "looks like it's real," according to Dan Stevenson, principal at the high school.

School busing may be eliminated or placed on a pay-as-you-go basis. Course offerings at the high school are being reduced somewhat; athletics may be available only on a fee basis; the elementary school music program is being cut back.

"We don't know what the impact will be in terms of ADA," Wilsdon said.

"It doesn't take too many people saying, 'I like the public school system but what it's doing I don't like'" and taking their kids out to have a big impact on state assistance and, thus, the district budget, he said.

"In the old days we could live with that," Wilsdon said.

Now, it could mean a sharp drop in revenues with even more serious effects on an already tight budget.

At $1,700 per student in ADA assistance, "if we lose 50 kids, we're talking about big money," he said. "If we lose $80,000, $90,000, $100,000, we're in real trouble."

And all this is out of the school board's control, Wilsdon said. The trustees are more and more "a lightning rod for frustration" rather than a policy-making body with local control over local education.

As one district administrator commented, "About all they can decide is what color to paint the schools."

Wilsdon said there is no question that the teachers deserve more money, adding, "those dollars just aren't there."

•

BOARD PRESIDENT Clayton Neill Jr. said the equation for pay raises is "a choice between two bad choices. A 1 percent raise equals two layoffs."

The board has asked its citizens' budget committee to propose between $600,000 and $800,000 in cuts to balance this year's spending program. Those cuts are predicated upon a raise of about 6 percent for teachers next year and somewhat less this year.

According to one party in current salary talks, the district is offering a 3.5 percent raise and the teachers are requesting 6.5 percent for 1978-79.

With perhaps 100 teachers and parents in the audience at the Middle School library last week, teachers argued their case for a substantial two-year salary increase with passion and drama.

Middle School math instructor Al Kolb said the pay hike is justified because inflation has eaten away at the buying power for the past decade or more.

He produced three separate charts showing how the buying power of Carmel teacher salaries has eroded since 1965. It has declined between 11.4 percent and 15 percent in the last five years alone.

"That's our contribution, our subsidization of the Carmel Unified School District," Kolb said.

"No matter how you slice it, if we don't get a double-digit raise, you're going to lose people," he added.

Then, passing out brochures for the trucking firm he works with part-time, Kolb told the grim-faced trustees, "You're going to have more of us moonlighting. That's where I spend my Christmases, that's where I spend my Thanksgivings, and that's why I came back darn near midnight Easter Sunday."

•

DEE DRESSER, a counselor at Middle School, said morale is low and dropping throughout the district.

"We feel like second-class citizens, beggars at the bargaining table," she told trustees. "Although we feel pretty good about what we're doing, I'm beginning to wonder how long that self-esteem will hold out."

Allura Fishburn, librarian at Middle School, said a survey of district teachers brought responses showing 75 percent cannot support themselves and their families solely on their own salaries.

She told trustees it is essential to act quickly on contract negotiations because of impending wage and price freezes she fears will come out of Washington this year.

Without reasonable pay increases, Mrs. Fishburn said, "You might push us into the corner of not acting as professionals. I'm not talking about a strike or a walkout," she added, saying only that teachers might "freeze services" to pupils and parents.

Miguel Parral, a fourth-year foreign language teacher with the district, said the declining buying power of salaries is dampening the enthusiasm of teachers.

"People in this district once were really proud to be teachers in Carmel," he said. But without better salaries, "You will find a mass exodus of people who never even thought of leaving the district."

"The economic situation in this district, in California, is forcing people to leave education," Parral said. "We're going to lose some very proficient, very exciting teachers."

•

AT THE OTHER END of the scale, 26-year teacher Ken Wiese said he might delay retirement if pay does not rise faster.

Since retirement pay in the Carmel district is based on the highest salary for any three consecutive years, Wiese said he might stay on longer than he wants to teach just to get that extra pay so he can live on his pension.

"My salary is not keeping up with the cost of living," he said. "This is enough to make a person anxious and fearful. We need some help now, not in the future."

ACT President Bruce Stannard said it is "just essential that the board do the right thing this year."

•

BESIDES THE PAY increase package, teachers are asking next year for:

- A reduction in the school year from 177 to 175 days for students, with teachers on the job 177 days.
- A reduction in the class size average for grades K-5 to 24 students per teacher, with the current 26-to-one ratio remaining in effect for grades 6 through 12. No individual class would be allowed to go above those figures. Current district policy allows averaging of several classes or district-wide to arrive at the pupil-teacher ratio.
- Binding arbitration of grievances between teachers and the district, with the decision of an outside arbiter final in all cases.
- Three additional days of "personal necessity" leave for unspecified emergencies.
- A new formula for setting coaches' salaries.

The Carmel trustees will make their formal counter offer to the contract proposal of both the ACT and the CSEA on May 7 at 7:30 p.m. They will hold a public hearing on the issue in the Middle School library, and then open closed-door contract talks with the employee groups.

Who will be new chairman of city planning commission?

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

WHEN ROBERT STEPHENSON'S term as chairman of the Carmel Planning Commission expires in three weeks, the seat could be inherited by Dr. Donald Davidson.

Davidson has stated he is anxious to take the reins. Stephenson has confirmed he is not interested in a second term at the helm, and may even support Davidson.

A new chairman will be named at a special May 23 commission meeting. That annual meeting is scheduled after the regular 4 p.m. Board of Adjustments session.

"Sure, I'd like to be chairman," Davidson revealed in an interview last week. "The chairmanship should rotate. That avoids any undue amount of power vested in one person," he said.

•

STEPHENSON SAID flatly he is not interested.

"I don't want it," he declared in an interview last week. "It shouldn't be a hereditary job. Besides, I've got to make a living," he said.

A building designer by profession, Stephenson said the long hours devoted to commission work have cost him plenty. "My income is down so much, I didn't even have to pay income tax this year," he said ruefully.

If he was elected by his fellow commissioners, however, Stephenson said he would serve a second term.

"I really hope they elect somebody else," he said. "I know I'm voting for somebody else," he confirmed. He refused to state whom he supports.

•

ALTHOUGH STEPHENSON is prepared to bow out, Davidson may have trouble collecting majority commission support.

Davidson, a two-year member, has antagonized a commission faction that strongly backs Carmel Mayor Gunnar Norberg's anti-development platform. His former anti-business views have been modified considerably since Norberg appointed him in June 1977.

Davidson's appointment prompted David Hughes, the former councilman, to call for Norberg's removal as mayor. Hughes accused Norberg of "stacking" the commission with members of the Old Carmel residents' lobby.

Davidson recently lectured the commission on the need to support Carmel's business community. At a meeting last month, he irked some commissioners by handing out a list of sales tax figures, to support his views. The statistics showed the city collected nearly $800,000 in sales taxes from Carmel merchants in 1978.

Davidson was the only commissioner to vote against a provocative design review proposal that was finally dropped by the council. He has also fought for modification of Carmel's rigid control on "second kitchens."

As chairman of the commission's land use subcommittee, Davidson has authored committee reports critical of Norberg's proposed controls of Carmel businesses.

A Carmel physician, he has voiced support for legislation to help Carmel's elderly residents.

•

IT IS SPECULATED that Davidson could receive support from Stephenson and John Logan, the newest commissioner. But Commissioners Arthur Mertens and Sandy Swain told the Pine Cone they would support Stephenson for a second term.

That could leave Commissioner Dr. Manfred Prescott with the swing vote. Eileen Thompson, the seventh commissioner, resigned last month because of a move to Pebble Beach.

Prescott, who will turn 80 this year, was unwilling to commit his support during a telephone interview last week. Prescott indicated that he may be interested in the post. "I'm certainly a possibility," he stated.

Logan, Mertens and Miss Swain all confirmed they are not interested in the chairmanship.

"I'd like to ride along with ol' Robert (Stephenson). He's just getting his full steam now," said Miss Swain. She said it would be a "mistake" to put a "neophyte" commissioner in the top seat. Stephenson, the veteran member, has served on the commission less than three years. His term expires in May 1980.

Mertens said he hopes Stephenson changes his mind. "We have the best chairman we could possibly have right now. He (Stephenson) has done a marvelous job," Mertens said.

How does Stephenson feel about the job he's done?

"I'm humorous, long-winded and disorganized. However, I do think the commission has turned out an awful lot of work. All I do is pound the gavel and keep order," he stated.

•

LOGAN SAID HE is too new to grasp the top slot, and that his work will force him to miss too many commission meetings. The groundwater consultant will spend all of June on a job in Central Africa.

Davidson has planned to attend a month-long medical seminar this month. He will not attend the annual meeting. For that reason, Stephenson has decided to hold the chairmanship election by ballot, prior to the session. The new chairman will be announced at the meeting.

"It's time for someone else to take over," Stephenson said.

•

BUT TERMS of two years and longer are not unusual, according to Robert Griggs, the Carmel planning director.

Dorothea Roberts was chairman for two consecutive terms. Fred Keeble, a former chairman, served three terms. The first chairman of the commission, P.A. McCreary, served for six consecutive years, from 1947 through 1952, according to Griggs.

BUSY MEETING OF CITY COUNCIL

THE ZONING ordinance took another step toward final passage at Wednesday night's council meeting when it had its first official reading and the date of June 5 was set for the public hearing which must precede its passage. No major change has been made since the draft of it was published in the Pine Cone. It remains drastic, yet reasonable, a protection of Carmel's home loving people.

A first reading was given an ordinance repealing Ordinance 43, which provided for a City Planning Commission, and for dissolving the present planning board. This action, it was explained, was for the purpose of removing a possible obstacle in the passage of the zoning ordinance. It was intimated that after the passage of the latter law, the commission might be revived.

The petition of the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. for a franchise to lay gas mains was continued to the next meeting, and the council's attorney was instructed to consult with the corporation's attorneys for a clause for the protection of the city's trees.

BASEBALL ON ABALONE FIELD

Meeting the winner of the Seaside and Del Monte Military Academy game, the Sunset ball tossers will make a strong attempt to wrest the baseball laurels of the interschool elementary baseball league this Friday on Abalone Field. With the exception of the last game Sunday, the home team has displayed a good brand of baseball and will be a hard team to beat.

FIRST TALKIE AT GOLDEN BOUGH

The Theatre of the Golden Bough opens its program on Monday with the Warner Brothers Vitaphone all-talking attraction The Lights of New York. Carmel is the smallest town and the Golden Bough is the smallest theater in the world to run Vitaphone Talking Pictures, say the movie advertisements.

This picture is proof of the perfection which has been attained in screen conversation, the voices of the characters blending as the various instruments in a well-trained orchestra.

Following Lights of New York is Women They Talk About, The Singing Fool with Al Jolson, The Terror, On Trial, The Bellamy Trial, Sonny Boy, Lion and the Mouse and The Desert Song.

Other very surprising announcements will follow in rapid succession. How often and how big depends altogether how the people of Carmel support their theater.

AN EDITORIAL

The Pacific Gas and Electric Co. is asking the council for a franchise allowing it to bring gas from Monterey to supply the homes of Carmel. This is a big invitation. It is one of those things which it might be supposed would come against serious opposition of the people who are opposed to "progress."

But that is not true. Despite the tales of the San Francisco newspapers, where art buckles on armor and points lances at the heart of progress, Carmel is the most reasonable town in the world regarding growth and improvements. And of its people, the artists, writers and musicians are the sanest and most logical. They want each home to have comfort up to the limit of today's possibilities. Not the log cabin and rush-light of the pioneer, but the most modern conveniences.

It is time for gas in Carmel. The day has gone when one might go into the forest with a saw and ax and cut enough dead timber to supply the winter's need of fuel. No longer does the sea cast up driftwood sufficient for the hunger of our fireplaces. The manzanita roots which might be mined in most any yard are exhausted. A reasonable and economical method of heating the homes of our people and cooking their meals is a real need now.

Like other folks, our artists want freedom from the menace of fire or the stink of coal-oil fumes that comes with the kitchen three-burner or the oil-furnace. They welcome the coming of gas to Carmel.

PILGRIMS ARRIVE FOR RITES

THIS WEEKEND WILL find Carmel Mission the object of a pilgrimage for thousands of Catholics from all parts of the West. How many thousands, no one seems to know, until this Sunday when the majority of the pilgrims will arrive for the concluding ceremonies in the Marian Week sponsored by the Franciscan National Marian Congress.

Weekend exercises at the Mission start this morning with a children's pilgrimage to the statue of the Lady of Belen. Solemn Pontifical Mass will be celebrated in the Mission quadrangle at noon Sunday followed by musical tributes to Mary from representatives of 20 nations. An evening program will include a concert of orchestral and choral sacred music. In addition, displays of fireworks will be set off at the Monterey Wharf at 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday evenings.

LITTLE REST ROOM BOBS UP AGAIN

Welcome back, little rest room!

A rest room for the south end of the beach near Thirteenth Avenue, proposed by Councilwoman Geraldine Smith last spring, which bounced back and forth all summer between the planning commission which said no and the council which said maybe, and died with plans submitted last fall by Planning Commissioner Lew Snyer ($5,000 cottage) has come up again with the flowers of spring.

At Wednesday night's council meeting, John Chitwood read a letter from the recreation committee asking for a rest room in the same place. Jerry Smith renewed her championship of last year's sad little orphan. Francis Whitaker grumbled that it would cost plenty in maintenance, but suggested that since it was to be located near the county line, the county might be persuaded to come in on the building cost.

Final decision: to communicate with the county and see what they would be willing to do.

The Pine Cone editor has been listening for years to Carmel people with kids asking, "Why isn't there a rest room at the south end of the beach?" and passing on the suggestion with a strong "yes" recommendation.

Another spring: another try!

CARMEL POSTAL CHIEF EXPLAINS RATE HIKE

AN INHERITED postal deficit of $1.2 billion is responsible for the proposals to raise the postage bill for residents of Carmel, according to Assistant Postmaster William P. Woolsey.

In addition to increasing letter mail from six to seven cents, as proposed by the Johnson Administration, President Nixon also asked that second- and third-class mailers help reduce the largest postal deficit which would otherwise be paid by taxpayers, the postmaster said.

Woolsey said he had been advised by Postmaster General Winton M. Blount in Washington, that the record $1.2 billion 1970 deficit compelled President Nixon to seek postage rate increases. The recommended increases will reduce the 1970 postal deficit by more than $600 million.

COUNCIL FAVORS RESTAURANT PONDERS OTHER SHIFTS

When a report from the city's Cultural Commission was read by City Administrator Hugh Bayless at last night's council meeting, members of the City Council seemed at first reluctant to take a stand favoring the establishment of a restaurant at the city-owned Sunset Center. One of the "requirements for application" is that any successful applicant "must be eligible for and must obtain a beer and wine license."

Finally the council did take such a stand—and without a dissenting vote. Though the council favored the restaurant, it did not act on the further Cultural Commission proposal to keep City Hall uses off the property.

Councilman Eben Whittlesey referred to the possibility that both the post office and the city library might have to be located on the Sunset property before too long.

The lease on the present post office site expires in July 1970. Meanwhile the city library board has proposed relocation of its facilities, and on a substantially enlarged basis, at Sunset. There has been some thought that such facilities could be provided only by the city and only at Sunset.

"Even the Kitchen Sink: A Rummage Sale of Distinction" will be presented Saturday, May 12 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The third annual sale, sponsored by the All Saints' Episcopal Churchwomen, will be in the Parish Hall, Lincoln and Ninth.

Items collected so far include a set of Wedgwood china, oriental silks, Bavarian porcelain and Rosenthal vases. All these "collectibles" will be sold in a silent auction from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. In addition to this better-than-usual fare, there will be a variety of toys, clothing, books, appliances and furniture. Child care will be provided, and a snack bar will be available. Proceeds will benefit the All Saints' Church, its parish and community activities, and the All Saints' Day School.

The All Saints' Youth Group will host a talent auction on Sunday, May 6 at 10:10 a.m. in the Education Building. Members of the group will be auctioned off to perform any number of cleaning, gardening or household chores for that afternoon. Parents are not allowed to buy their own children, and all proceeds will benefit local charities.

The Rev. Richard Wilmington, formerly a priest at Grace Cathedral in San Francisco, will be guest minister at the 9 and 11 a.m. services.

WAYFARER

"Speaking the Mother Tongue" is the title of the sermon to be delivered by the Rev. Charles Anker, associate minister at Church of the Wayfarer. The service, a yearly event since 1933, will feature the Rev. James F. Bracher, who will speak on "Suffer the Little Children to Come Unto Me." His message is part of the theme this year, "Our Children: Our Promise," which is underscoring the United Nation's declaration of 1979 as "The Year of the Child."

All interested church women are invited to attend and to bring a sack lunch for fellowship, dessert and coffee after the program. Child care will be provided.

"You Need Not Stay the Way You Are: Especially if You're Unhappy," is the title of the message to be given by the Rev. James F. Bracher at the 10:30 a.m. services on Sunday. His text is from Luke 25:11-34.

PRESBYTERIAN

Father Farrell's wisdom

They have the recipe for homemade bread

By the REV. LARRY FARRELL

The April 7 invocation delivered at the 50th anniversary celebration of Frank and Lillian Corda

It was at the Marriage Feast of Cana in Galilee that thy son performed His first public miracle. We ask a very special blessing on Frank and Lillian, who together with all of us and this family are celebrating the Golden Anniversary of this wedding 50 years ago.

None of us have attended many Golden Wedding anniversaries for the sinful reason that there are not many. As I drove here through an area and in a state where marriages are neither strong nor lasting, I said to myself, "I think Frank and Lillian's marriage is going to last." Fifty years ago they said, "I do" and not once "adieu."

A Padre asked a jubilarian wife if she had ever thought of divorce. "No Padre, divorce never—murder, yes—but never divorce."

So I did not say Frank and Lillian are celebrating 50 years of married bliss—that's nonsense. Bliss is perfect happiness reserved for that exclusive Celestial Club behind St. Peter's Gates. We live in a vale of tears so Frank and Lillian have honored their contract, weathered the storm, kept the faith. They have done what they promised to do at the altar half a century ago for better for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health until this day. What a glorious triumph for them and what a cause for joy for all of us!

Thank you Almighty God for giving them the recipe, not for golden rings and rainbow colored halos, not ever for a rich frosting covered wedding cake but for giving them the recipe for good, honest, homemade bread.

You gave them the wisdom, O Lord, to pick the right ingredients, the best flour, the freshest milk, the correct yeast, to knead the dough. And you gave them time to let it rise, to bake slowly in a good oven. Now we see the loaves, golden brown, warm, fragrant and nutritious, a heaping basketful never empty, never stale, ready for all of us to savor.

Thank you Lord for giving us Frank and Lillian and for keeping them faithful unto thee and each other in sunshine and in shower. Continue to hold them in the hollow of thy loving hand.

Gas pinch will get worse by summer

Tempers flare at times. Lugo said angry customers have vowed "never to come back." The gasoline shortage, however, is not the fault of station owners, Lugo said. He has posted signs that encourage customers to complain to their congressmen.

The Carmel Fire Department says the Saturday morning tie-ups create hazards.

"Sure, it's a hazard," said Vern Allred, the assistant fire chief. "If a fire broke out around there, we'd have to change our whole method of fire fighting," he said.

Police, firemen and station owners are scheduled to meet later this week to discuss traffic remedies.

•

WILL CARMEL businesses be at the short end of a gasoline shortage?

The statistics don't show it, according to Lee Chamberlin, executive secretary of the Carmel Business Association. The association received twice as many travel inquiries in March as it did the year before. Requests for information jumped from 638 in March 1978 to 1,316 in March 1979.

"People have got money, and they're going to travel no matter what," commented Mrs. Chamberlin.

One citizens' group is worried, though.

"The city could be lulling itself into a disaster," warned William Doolittle, president of the Carmel Citizens Committee. "Tourists could just be taking a last fling before the gas situation worsens this summer," he predicted.

"The city should re-evaluate its revenue sources. It could face cutbacks in retail sales," Doolittle said. Tourist tax dollars are obviously vital to the city's economy. Sales tax revenues totaled nearly $757,000 last year. Hostelry tax revenues exceeded $700,000.

RUMORS ABOUT gasoline shortages in this area do have some tourists worried. Senator Alan Cranston recently fielded questions about the gasoline pinch, on a radio talk show in the San Francisco Bay Area.

An anxious caller asked Cranston if it was true that visitors had to show hotel receipts to get gasoline in Carmel.

Cranston said he didn't know.

Lawrence McFarland uses a wide-angle lens and horizontal format in his landscape photographs on view at The Friends of Photography.

Preview, reception Friday

New photographers prints on exhibit at Friends gallery

Prints by three emerging photographers will be exhibited at The Friends of Photography gallery in Sunset Center, Carmel. A preview and opening reception is planned Friday, May 4 from 8-10 p.m.; the public is invited.

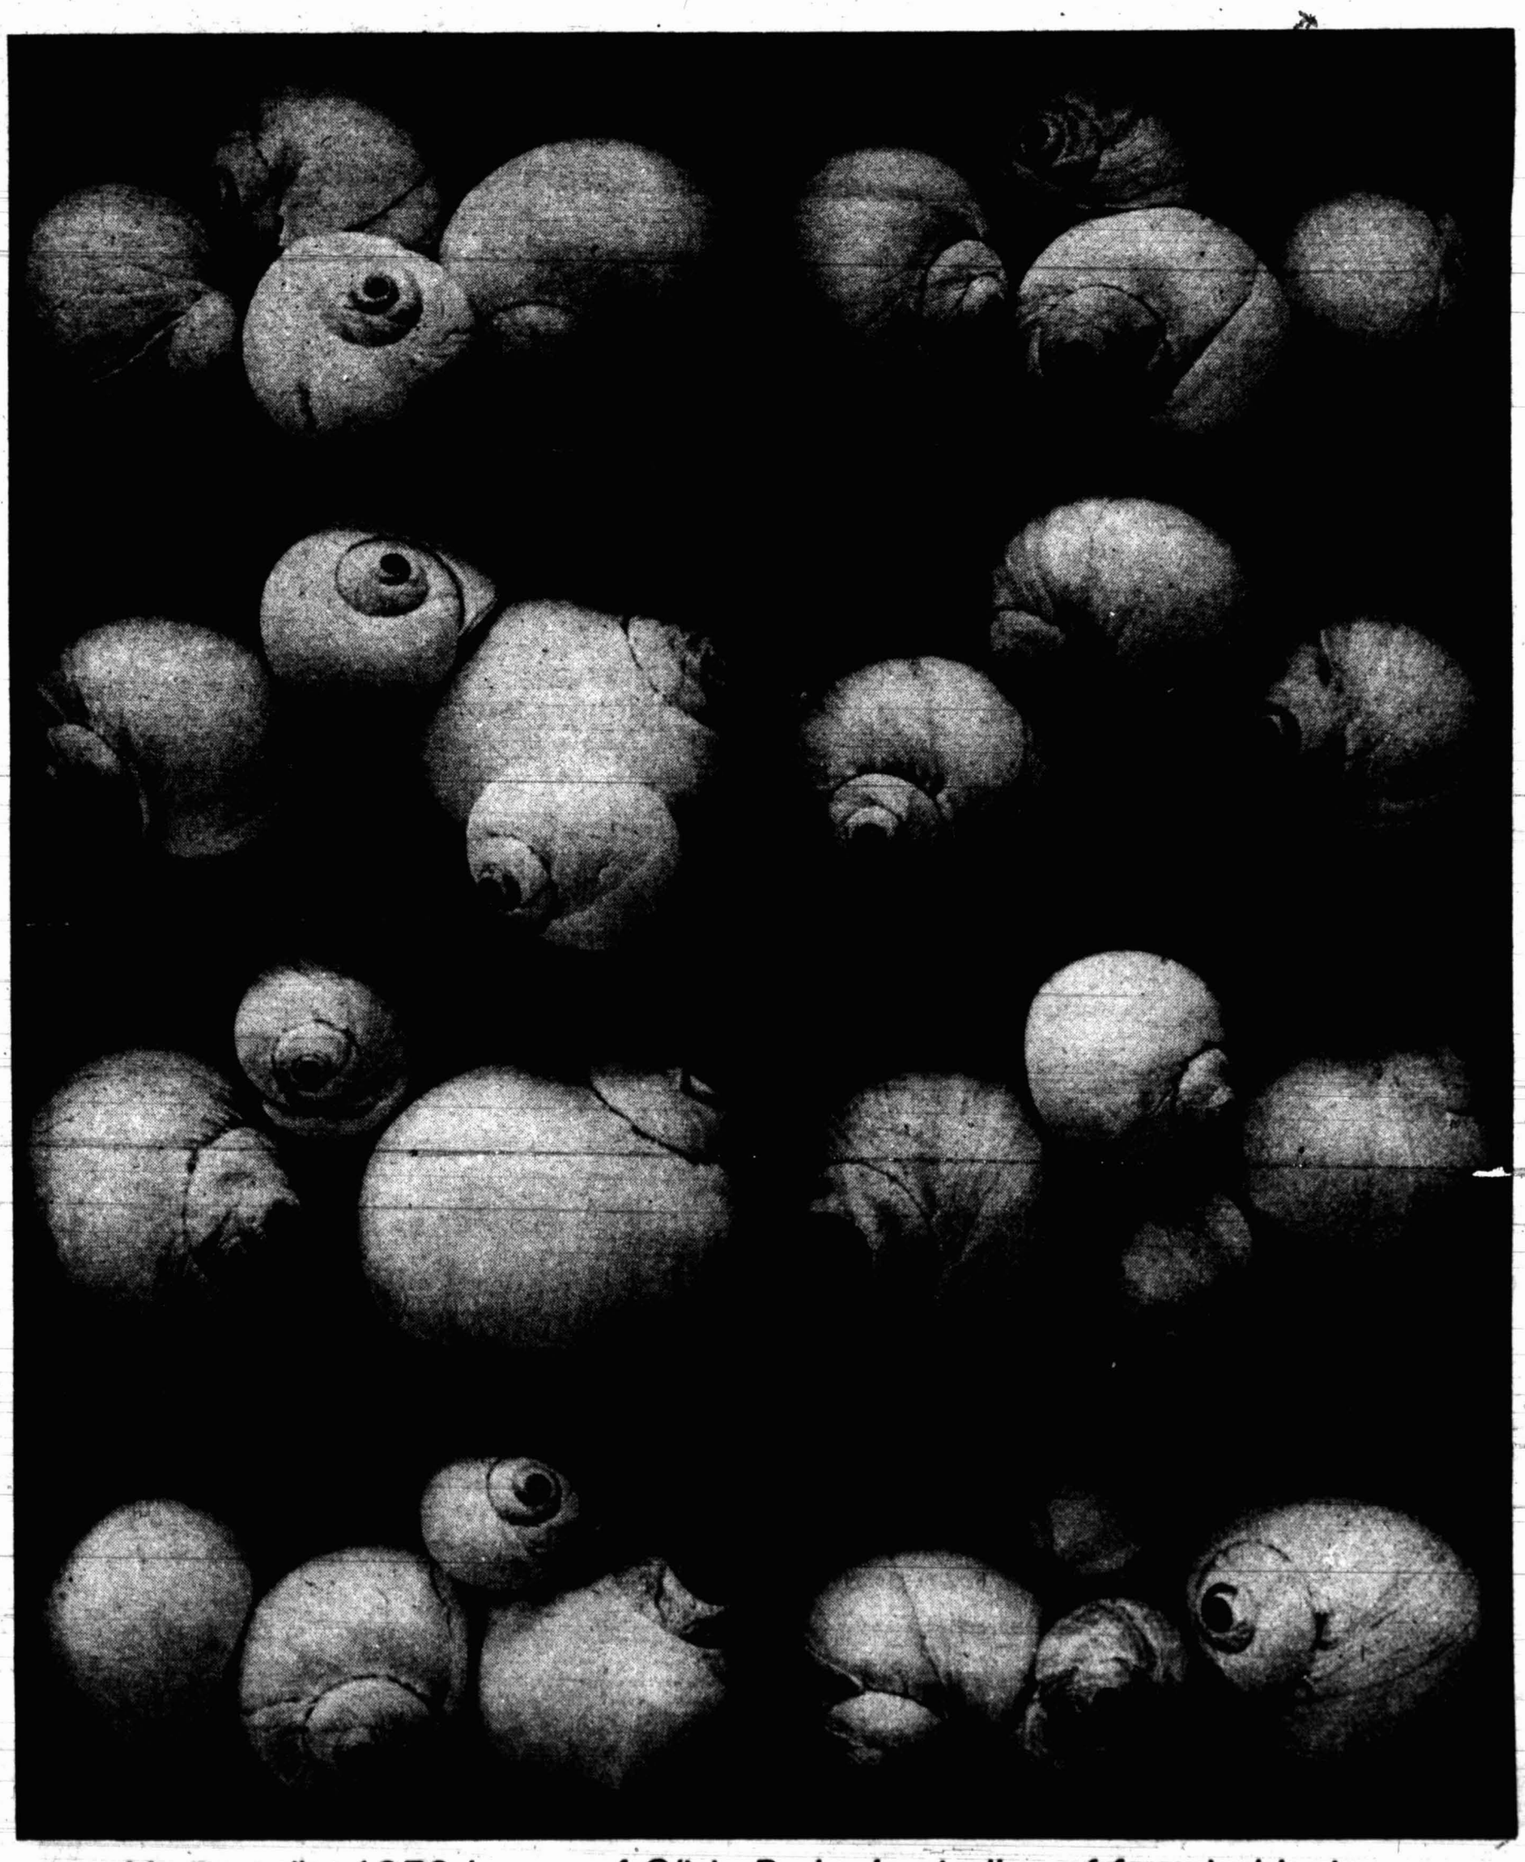
It has become a tradition with The Friends to show work by promising new photographers. The trio whose work will be on view through June 3 have exhibited and published their work, but are just beginning to receive deserved acknowledgment.

A native of England, Ken Baird now lives in Albuquerque, N.M., where he has completed work toward his master's degree in art at the university. He utilizes a diamond-shaped format in his black-and-white prints which draws increased attention to the relationships between the horizon line and the forms of the landscape objects with in the frame.

Lawrence McFarland received his M.F.A. in photography from the University of Nebraska in 1976. He lives in McCoy, Colo., and teaches photography at Colorado Mountain College in Leadville. Through a combination of open perspective created by the wide-angle lens and a horizontal format, McFarland explores the formal yet commonplace elements of the landscape in his photographs.

Olivia Parker studied photography in the Boston area during the early 1970s and has evolved a personal style which is becoming widely acclaimed. Her contact prints are specially toned to achieve a subtle range of colors from silver-blue to rust. Her images are still lifes and arrangements of found objects which assume new dimensions in her work.

Gallery hours are 1-5 p.m., Tuesday through Sunday. For further information, phone 624-6330.



Moonsnails, 1978 is one of Olivia Parker's studies of found objects included in an exhibit at The Friends of Photography.

MARCH OF DIMES WALKATHON SATURDAY

Young and old alike are welcome to join the seventh annual Walkathon, Saturday, May 5 to help raise funds for the March of Dimes fight against birth defects.

Registration will be 7:30-8:30 a.m. in the cafeteria of Monterey High School on Herrmann Drive. The 30-kilometer walk will begin and end (for some) at that point.

Walkers may drop out at any time but they will be urged on by a number of related events: a skydiving exhibition (weather permitting) at 7:45 a.m., the Peacemakers Drill Corps, who will lead the Walkathon at the start, various radio and television personalities, the Wylie Band and Smokey the Bear.

Snacks and goodies will be donated by friendly merchants along the path and prizes will be given.

Honorary Chairman Sam Farr, Monterey County Supervisor, and March of Dimes Executive Director Nancy Snow urge everyone to join in this annual foot feat and say, "If you can't walk, please sponsor someone who can!"

For more information, phone the March of Dimes office, 373-8482.

FISH & GAME LAB OPEN HOUSE MAY 5

The California Department of Fish and Game will open the Marine Culture Laboratory to the public for its annual open house, Saturday, May 5 from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. The research facility is located nine miles south of Carmel on Highway 1. There is no charge to attend.

The Marine Culture Laboratory is an experimental institution which investigates techniques for culturing Dungeness crabs, red abalone and Pismo clams during their larval stages. Unlike a hatchery, experimentation at the lab is explored on a small-scale basis. As culture techniques are perfected, larger laboratories or hatcheries take up the task of producing large numbers of shellfish.

Department personnel will be on hand to explain the operations of the lab and other Fish and Game projects in Central California, including otters, fish and other shellfish.

Children may explore the touch tank at the lab. Tidepool animals, mussels, snails, abalone, starfish, sea urchins, anemones and small fish will be within arms reach.

For further information, phone 624-0255.

The Music Corner:

Polish pianists present rousing MPC concert

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

TWO POLISH PIANISTS, one a sensitive artist and the other a percussionist in disguise, played works by Chopin and other Polish composers last Friday at Monterey Peninsula College. The event was sponsored by the college and generously ballyhooed in an expansive program booklet that contained articles about the Pope, travel in Poland and other events of interest to the Polish community, published by the Polish Arts and Culture Foundation of San Francisco.

Tadeusz Kerner was the artist. He appeared first, playing two Chopin pieces and works by Szymanowski, Paderewski, Szeligowski and Moniuszko. Rhythmic characteristics we associate with Poland, ritards and rallartandos typically heard in polonaises and mazurkas, were very much the flavor Kerner applied to his playing, but these and other musical values were in restraint, resulting in subtle and gracious playing. The opening Chopin nocturne was understated and in the following Scherzo, Opus 31, the performance reached the big proportions suggested by the music, and was rousing.

•

THE TWO SZYMANOWSKI pieces were excellently treated. The wistful, though haunting, Mazurka No. 1 was lovely and tightly atmospheric. The Etude in b-flat minor, Opus 4 had the richly sonorous texture of Brahms, the heroic splash of Rachmaninoff and the romance of Chopin, and Kerner added flair and illumination.

After the familiar and classically-made Paderewski minuet, Kerner brought light, clear attention to Sonatina by Szeligowski. The work is a delight capturing the spikey exuberance of Shostakovich and the cosmopolitan sophistication of both Poulenc and Milhaud. How much of the composer's personal style it contains is difficult to judge considering how rarely his works are heard in this country. But Kerner was at no loss to add subtle flavor to his suave manner. Nor was he intimidated by the brilliant Kabalevsky-style toccata finale.

A keyboard arrangement of Moniuszko song, The Spinning Girl, an estimable tune in weak imitation of Schubert, was dispassionately spun, and the pianist's encores were a Chopin waltz, less than convincingly phrased, and a Gershwin arrangement of Swanee.

Elzbieta Tarnawska played only Chopin and at that deviated from the printed program. She had plenty of power and robustness. She also demonstrated imposing talent and the ability to achieve subtle and impulsive phrasing. But dynamically she never delved below mezzo forte and in much of her playing she set up a relentless pounding that had all the subtlety of a jackhammer. She certainly wrought incredible volumes of sound out of the six or seven-foot grand, but the clanging and banging suggested that her audience was deaf. Much more than her 40 minutes in the ring with Chopin and it would have been.

•

DECEMBER BEFORE LAST, the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society did the Bach Magnificat and a little Mozart mass in its Carmel Mission Christmas concert. The bass soloist was James Courtney, a richly-endowed singer and talented actor who teaches at UCSC. Courtney recently won a 30-week contract to sing at the Met and will open his career in that august institution this fall as Angelotti in Tosca. In fact we will be able to hear him in that role in the Met radio broadcast of Jan. 26, 1980.

Reason for mentioning him now is his appearance last Saturday night with the Santa Cruz Festival of Living Music's "Musical Intoxicants" program. He was a major part of the success of a funny and charming presentation at Santa Cruz' Laurel Community Center when he joined soprano Jean Spencer, tenor John Hajdu, harpsichordist Linda Burman-Hall and the festival ensemble.

The Santa Cruz Festival of Living Music is a six-year-old project that has not only brought a unique repertoire of Baroque and earlier music to the Santa Cruz community but has featured many world-famous artists who are noted for their specialty in early music.

Such names as Frans Bruggen, Anner Bylsma, Alan Curtis, Mark Kroll and Heiichiro Ohyama have been included in the festival's programs. In most cases the reputation of these artists has preceded them through many outstanding recordings produced by such prestigious labels as Telefunken, Seon and Deutsche Grammophon.

•

THE FESTIVAL OF LIVING MUSIC is the brainchild of Linda Burman-Hall, musician, scholar, UCSC professor and hostess of "Dr. Hall's Baroque Tonic" Friday mornings on station KUSP-FM 89 in Santa Cruz. Miss Burman-Hall has applied herself to what is obviously a person-killing task and has secured some of the best talent in Europe for the festival by personally going there, principally to Holland, to make the contacts and capture the contracts.

The result is that the festival has a track record of pure excellence, an enthusiastic following in Santa Cruz and the brains and talent of Miss Burman-Hall to thank and to depend on.

"Musical Intoxicants" included Uplifting Thoughts of a Tobacco Smoker attributed to Gottfried Henrich Bach, the eldest son of Anna Magdalena Bach, Tobacco is Like Love by Tobias Hume, the "Coffee" Cantata, BWV 211 by Bach and various drinking songs from the Williamsburg collection of 17th century pieces.

The performers were costumed and wigged and characterized their roles with melodramatic gestures and inflections. Subject and presentation thoroughly entertained the large audience though the drinking song second half stimulated the most amusement.

The three singers sat at a table with champagne and mugs, each taking a turn with a different song and all finishing with a trio. Mr. Courtney filled a mug with the bubbly which promptly reared its foaming head and flooded the table and the sheet music. The evening seemed to be made for Courtney's many talents.

•

NOHEMA FERNANDEZ and Lou Matthews spread a little joy Sunday afternoon at Community Church in Carmel Valley with a piano duet concert. (A piano duet involves four hands but only one piano.)

The program included a two-movement sonata by Christian Bach, Souvenirs by Barber, the Fantasia in f minor by Schubert and Jeux d'enfants by Bizet.

The Barber piece was a highlight. Not only was it well played but it is rarely heard and came as a refreshing pleasure. Its six movements are all dances and the whole piece is not unlike a Ravel reminiscence of 1914 ballroom favorites.

The musical moods are different from number to number. The Schottische is whimsical with some "out of tune" features and a big finish. The Pas de deux brought together a Chopin nocturne and a Satie Gymnopedie and purported a certain sadness. The Hesitation Tango was touched with irony and seriousness. Its lower voices in this number were not rhythmically well articulated and it did not seem convincingly expressed.

The Schubert Fantasia in f minor suffered the constant acoustic deficiency of the church which robbed the lower range of the piano of its clarity and articulate bite. Otherwise it was well played though not with the depth the work contains.

And there remains a qualitative discrepancy between the two musicians. Miss Fernandez has an extraordinary background including study with the great Jorge Bolet, and her touch and phrase are of the highest order.

Bizet's delightful Jeux d'enfants was given a delightful romp. Especially tender were The Doll and Playing House. Bugler and Drummer is a march as enchanting as the one from The Nutcracker and was bubbly and precise.

The encore was part of the Waltzes, Opus 39 by Brahms.

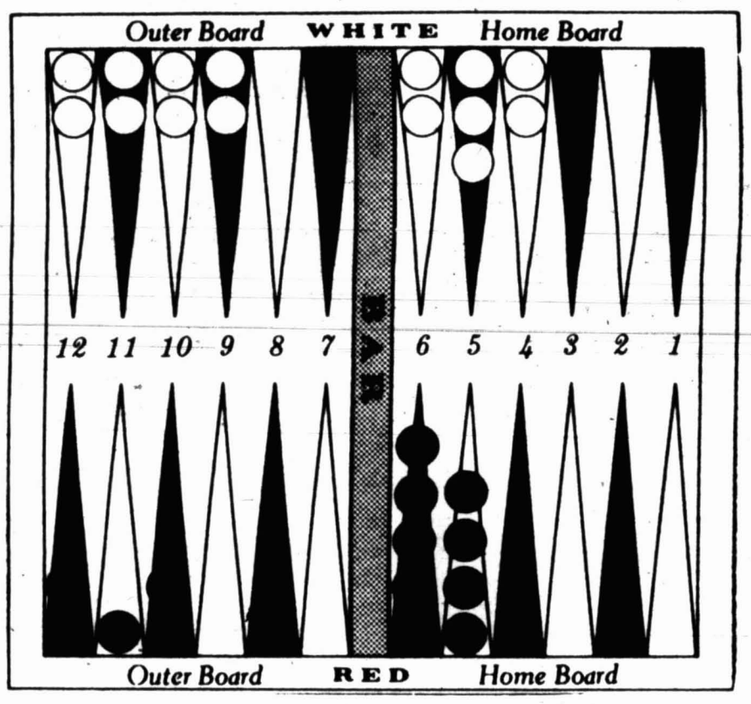
Backgammon

By OMAR SHARIF



It is Red's turn to roll. Should he double?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

It is our opinion that proper technique in handling the doubling cube is the essence of modern backgammon. That is why we have devoted some time to a variety of positions that involve the doubling cube. More points are lost through sloppy handling of the cube than in any other phase of the game.

Here's a case in point. If you take a pip count you will find that Red is ahead 109 to 119—more than a full roll—and has the advantage of the roll, which is actually worth about half a roll. This is a healthy lead, but there is still a long way to go in the game and it is by no means an insurmountable edge.

More important, however, is that Red's position is a little uncomfortable. He is stacked on his 6- and 5-points, and he is likely to aggravate the situation as he bears in his men from his outer board. White, to a certain extent, faces a similar problem and he has to bear in three more men than does Red. But against that, White's deployment inside his home board is much better than Red's.

Taking all these factors into consideration, a double by Red now would be premature. If, after another two or three rolls, Red maintains or increases his lead, that would be the time to double.

TIP: The more rolls there are left in the game, the more substantial should be your lead before you consider doubling. When your pip count is over 100, don't think of doubling if your lead is fewer than 15 pips. If your lead is 20 pips or better, you are playing too conservatively if you don't double.

MARCH OF DIMES WALKATHON SATURDAY

Young and old alike are welcome to join the seventh annual Walkathon, Saturday, May 5 to help raise funds for the March of Dimes fight against birth defects.

Registration will be 7:30-8:30 a.m. in the cafeteria of Monterey High School on Herrmann Drive. The 30-kilometer walk will begin and end (for some) at that point.

Walkers may drop out at any time but they will be urged on by a number of related events: a skydiving exhibition (weather permitting) at 7:45 a.m., the Peacemakers Drill Corps, who will lead the Walkathon at the start, various radio and television personalities, the Wylie Band and Smokey the Bear.

Snacks and goodies will be donated by friendly merchants along the path and prizes will be given.

Honorary Chairman Sam Farr, Monterey County Supervisor, and March of Dimes Executive Director Nancy Snow urge everyone to join in this annual foot feat and say, "If you can't walk, please sponsor someone who can!"

For more information, phone the March of Dimes office, 373-8482.

FISH & GAME LAB OPEN HOUSE MAY 5

The California Department of Fish and Game will open the Marine Culture Laboratory to the public for its annual open house, Saturday, May 5 from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. The research facility is located nine miles south of Carmel on Highway 1. There is no charge to attend.

The Marine Culture Laboratory is an experimental institution which investigates techniques for culturing Dungeness crabs, red abalone and Pismo clams during their larval stages. Unlike a hatchery, experimentation at the lab is explored on a small-scale basis. As culture techniques are perfected, larger laboratories or hatcheries take up the task of producing large numbers of shellfish.

Department personnel will be on hand to explain the operations of the lab and other Fish and Game projects in Central California, including otters, fish and other shellfish.

Children may explore the touch tank at the lab. Tidepool animals, mussels, snails, abalone, starfish, sea urchins, anemones and small fish will be within arms reach.

For further information, phone 624-0255.

The Music Corner:

Polish pianists present rousing MPC concert

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

TWO POLISH PIANISTS, one a sensitive artist and the other a percussionist in disguise, played works by Chopin and other Polish composers last Friday at Monterey Peninsula College. The event was sponsored by the college and generously ballyhooed in an expansive program booklet that contained articles about the Pope, travel in Poland and other events of interest to the Polish community, published by the Polish Arts and Culture Foundation of San Francisco.

Tadeusz Kerner was the artist. He appeared first, playing two Chopin pieces and works by Szymanowski, Paderewski, Szeligowski and Moniuszko. Rhythmic characteristics we associate with Poland, ritards and rallartandos typically heard in polonaises and mazurkas, were very much the flavor Kerner applied to his playing, but these and other musical values were in restraint, resulting in subtle and gracious playing. The opening Chopin nocturne was understated and in the following Scherzo, Opus 31, the performance reached the big proportions suggested by the music, and was rousing.

•

THE TWO SZYMANOWSKI pieces were excellently treated. The wistful, though haunting, Mazurka No. 1 was lovely and tightly atmospheric. The Etude in b-flat minor, Opus 4 had the richly sonorous texture of Brahms, the heroic splash of Rachmaninoff and the romance of Chopin, and Kerner added flair and illumination.

After the familiar and classically-made Paderewski minuet, Kerner brought light, clear attention to Sonatina by Szeligowski. The work is a delight capturing the spikey exuberance of Shostakovich and the cosmopolitan sophistication of both Poulenc and Milhaud. How much of the composer's personal style it contains is difficult to judge considering how rarely his works are heard in this country. But Kerner was at no loss to add subtle flavor to his suave manner. Nor was he intimidated by the brilliant Kabalevsky-style toccata finale.

A keyboard arrangement of Moniuszko song, The Spinning Girl, an estimable tune in weak imitation of Schubert, was dispassionately spun, and the pianist's encores were a Chopin waltz, less than convincingly phrased, and a Gershwin arrangement of Swanee.

Elzbieta Tarnawska played only Chopin and at that deviated from the printed program. She had plenty of power and robustness. She also demonstrated imposing talent and the ability to achieve subtle and impulsive phrasing. But dynamically she never delved below mezzo forte and in much of her playing she set up a relentless pounding that had all the subtlety of a jackhammer. She certainly wrought incredible volumes of sound out of the six or seven-foot grand, but the clanging and banging suggested that her audience was deaf. Much more than her 40 minutes in the ring with Chopin and it would have been.

•

DECEMBER BEFORE LAST, the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society did the Bach Magnificat and a little Mozart mass in its Carmel Mission Christmas concert. The bass soloist was James Courtney, a richly-endowed singer and talented actor who teaches at UCSC. Courtney recently won a 30-week contract to sing at the Met and will open his career in that august institution this fall as Angelotti in Tosca. In fact we will be able to hear him in that role in the Met radio broadcast of Jan. 26, 1980.

Reason for mentioning him now is his appearance last Saturday night with the Santa Cruz Festival of Living Music's "Musical Intoxicants" program. He was a major part of the success of a funny and charming presentation at Santa Cruz' Laurel Community Center when he joined soprano Jean Spencer, tenor John Hajdu, harpsichordist Linda Burman-Hall and the festival ensemble.

The Santa Cruz Festival of Living Music is a six-year-old project that has not only brought a unique repertoire of Baroque and earlier music to the Santa Cruz community but has featured many world-famous artists who are noted for their specialty in early music.

Such names as Frans Bruggen, Anner Bylsma, Alan Curtis, Mark Kroll and Heiichiro Ohyama have been included in the festival's programs. In most cases the reputation of these artists has preceded them through many outstanding recordings produced by such prestigious labels as Telefunken, Seon and Deutsche Grammophon.

•

THE FESTIVAL OF LIVING MUSIC is the brainchild of Linda Burman-Hall, musician, scholar, UCSC professor and hostess of "Dr. Hall's Baroque Tonic" Friday mornings on station KUSP-FM 89 in Santa Cruz. Miss Burman-Hall has applied herself to what is obviously a person-killing task and has secured some of the best talent in Europe for the festival by personally going there, principally to Holland, to make the contacts and capture the contracts.

The result is that the festival has a track record of pure excellence, an enthusiastic following in Santa Cruz and the brains and talent of Miss Burman-Hall to thank and to depend on.

"Musical Intoxicants" included Uplifting Thoughts of a Tobacco Smoker attributed to Gottfried Henrich Bach, the eldest son of Anna Magdalena Bach, Tobacco is Like Love by Tobias Hume, the "Coffee" Cantata, BWV 211 by Bach and various drinking songs from the Williamsburg collection of 17th century pieces.

The performers were costumed and wigged and characterized their roles with melodramatic gestures and inflections. Subject and presentation thoroughly entertained the large audience though the drinking song second half stimulated the most amusement.

The three singers sat at a table with champagne and mugs, each taking a turn with a different song and all finishing with a trio. Mr. Courtney filled a mug with the bubbly which promptly reared its foaming head and flooded the table and the sheet music. The evening seemed to be made for Courtney's many talents.

NOHEMA FERNANDEZ and Lou Matthews spread a little joy Sunday afternoon at Community Church in Carmel Valley with a piano duet concert. (A piano duet involves four hands but only one piano.)

The program included a two-movement sonata by Christian Bach, Souvenirs by Barber, the Fantasia in f minor by Schubert and Jeux d'enfants by Bizet.

The Barber piece was a highlight. Not only was it well played but it is rarely heard and came as a refreshing pleasure. Its six movements are all dances and the whole piece is not unlike a Ravel reminiscence of 1914 ballroom favorites.

The musical moods are different from number to number. The Schottische is whimsical with some "out of tune" features and a big finish. The Pas de deux brought together a Chopin nocturne and a Satie Gymnopedie and purported a certain sadness. The Hesitation Tango was touched with irony and seriousness. Its lower voices in this number were not rhythmically well articulated and it did not seem convincingly expressed.

The Schubert Fantasia in f minor suffered the constant acoustic deficiency of the church which robbed the lower range of the piano of its clarity and articulate bite. Otherwise it was well played though not with the depth the work contains.

And there remains a qualitative discrepancy between the two musicians. Miss Fernandez has an extraordinary background including study with the great Jorge Bolet, and her touch and phrase are of the highest order.

Bizet's delightful Jeux d'enfants was given a delightful romp. Especially tender were The Doll and Playing House. Bugler and Drummer is a march as enchanting as the one from The Nutcracker and was bubbly and precise.

The encore was part of the Walztes, Opus 39 by Brahms.

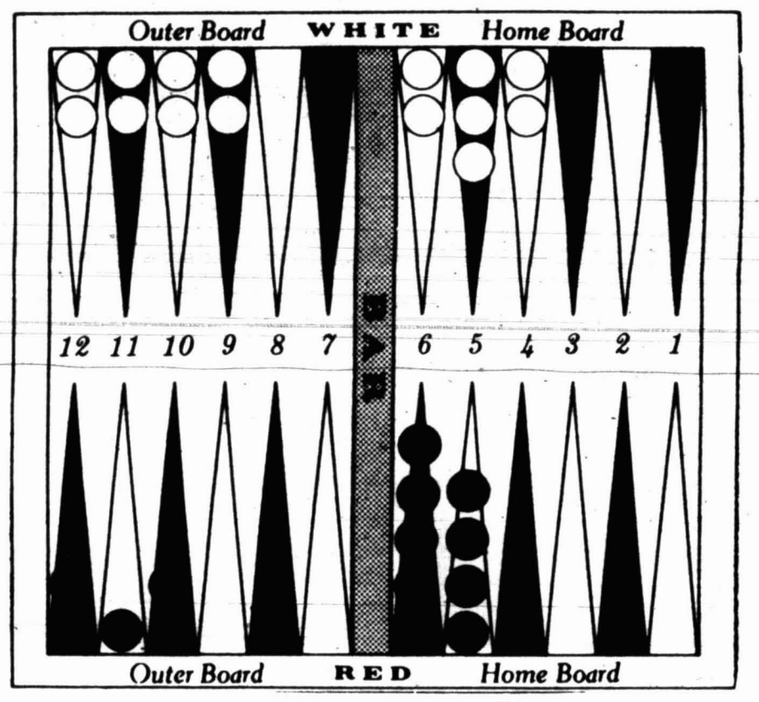
Backgammon

By OMAR SHARIF



It is Red's turn to roll. Should he double?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

It is our opinion that proper technique in handling the doubling cube is the essence of modern backgammon. That is why we have devoted some time to a variety of positions that involve the doubling cube. More points are lost through sloppy handling of the cube than in any other phase of the game.

Here's a case in point. If you take a pip count you will find that Red is ahead 109 to 119—more than a full roll—and has the advantage of the roll, which is actually worth about half a roll. This is a healthy lead, but there is still a long way to go in the game and it is by no means an insurmountable edge.

More important, however, is that Red's position is a little uncomfortable. He is stacked on his 6- and 5-points, and he is likely to aggravate the situation as he bears in his men from his outer board. White, to a certain extent, faces a similar problem and he has to bear in three more men than does Red. But against that, White's deployment inside his home board is much better than Red's.

Taking all these factors into consideration, a double by Red now would be premature. If, after another two or three rolls, Red maintains or increases his lead, that would be the time to double.

TIP: The more rolls there are left in the game, the more substantial should be your lead before you consider doubling. When your pip count is over 100, don't think of doubling if your lead is fewer than 15 pips. If your lead is 20 pips or better, you are playing too conservatively if you don't double.

AN ANNUAL love affair that spans 25 years between Doris (Janet DuPlain) and George (Leonard O'Neill) is the heart of the romantic comedy Same Time, Next Year on stage Friday through Saturday, May 4-6 at the Wharf Theatre, Monterey. (Del Kaller photo)

Written by Bernard Slade, the play is a reflection of two-and-a-half decades of manners, morals and attitudes in America mirrored in the changes of its only two characters. When Same Time, Next Year, was first staged on Broadway, Clive Barnes of the New York Times said, "It is the funniest comedy about love and adultery to come Broadway's way in years ... a delicious and very amoral kind of immoral play."

The play was released last year as a motion picture starring Alan Alda and Ellen Burstyn and was subsequently nominated for four Academy Awards. The local production, directed by Nick Hovick, stars Janet DuPlaine as Doris and Leonard O'Neill as George.

Same Time, Next Year will be staged through June 22.

For reservations or additional information, phone 372-7367.

THE BEDINI THEATRE Project Players of San Francisco will stage final performances of the comedy drama, A Guest in the House, Friday-Saturday, May 4-5, at the Studio Theatre/Restaurant, Carmel.

More than 200 horses, riders

Combined Training Event scheduled this weekend

The 40th annual Combined Training Event, an equestrian competition that will test the training and conditioning of more than 200 horses and riders, is scheduled Friday through Sunday, May 4-6 at the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center.

A tight cross-country schedule caused by the large number of entries has forced cancellation of the originally scheduled Hunter Trials, according to Richard Collins, director of the Equestrian Center. "Frankly," he said, "we don't have the time to run the trials."

Combined training, also known as eventing, is rapidly gaining popularity as an equine sport. Princess Anne of England is one of the best-known "eventers."

Horses schooled for combined training are shown in "three-day events" that consist of dressage, cross-country and stadium jumping over three consecutive days. The horses are expected to finish in sound condition.

Competition is graduated, with increasing demands put on horses and riders as they progress from pre-training through intermediate divisions. Dressage tests become more difficult; the distances covered and fences jumped on cross-country and stadium phases become longer and higher.

Dressage tests will be ridden Friday, May 4 at 7 a.m. and from 2 p.m.-4 p.m. on Collins Polo Field at the Equestrian Center. Dressage is the classic art of horsemanship that seeks to produce a relaxed, confident, supple and free-moving horse. At the higher levels, horses are capable of performing the beautiful, dance-like movements associated with the Spanish Riding School of Vienna.

The cross-country phase of competition is scheduled Saturday, May 5 at 8 a.m. Riders must guide their horses over a pre-measured distance of "roads and tracks," along courses through Del Monte Forest. In the upper divisions, a steeplechase element ridden at high speed over fences is included, followed by the cross-country course, which presents up to five miles of varied terrain with 18 to 20 fences, including some wicked slides, ditches and banks.

The cross-country courses include the Bird Rock Course along 17 Mile Drive. The oceanside course is spectacularly beautiful, and good vantage points are provided by the high rocky formations.

Riders will also navigate the Spyglass Sandpit, a treacherous two and one-half mile course, located across from the Spyglass Golf Course. It is considered the most taxing cross-country course for horses and riders.

Stadium jumping at the Equestrian Center begins Sunday, May 6 at 9 a.m. A variety of jumps is arranged with heights varying according to the training level of the horses. The pre-training and training entrants will compete in the morning. Upper level preliminary entrants will ride in the afternoon.

Winners of the Combined Training Event will be the entrants who have accumulated the fewest penalty points in the three phases of the three-day event.

Spectators are welcome to observe eventers all three days. There is no charge other than the $4-per-car gate fee at the entrance of the 17 Mile Drive. There are bleachers to observe stadium jumping and dressage. Because the Bird Rock Course may be windy and cold, visitors are advised to wear warm clothing.

The Equestrian Center is located north of The Lodge at Pebble Beach at the intersection of Portola Road and 17 Mile Drive.

For further information, phone 624-2756.

FORMIDABLE FENCES will challenge horses and riders at the Pebble Beach Combined Training Event Friday-Sunday, May 4-6, at the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center. Dressage, cross-country and stadium jumping competitions are scheduled.

Hartnell Theatre department stages 'The Robber Bridegroom'

The Robber Bridegroom, a rollicking bluegrass musical, will be staged for opening performances Friday through Sunday, May 4-6, in the Hartnell College Performing Arts Theatre, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. Curtains are at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday; Sunday matinee begins at 2 p.m.

A winner of Broadway's Tony Award, the musical comedy is the tale of a young man in pursuit of Rosamund, the daughter of the richest planter in the Mississippi Territory. Rosamund's stepmother hatches a plot to unite the errant lovers but not before the Harp Gang creates trouble for everyone.

The Robber Bridegroom is based on a novella by Eudora Welty with book and lyrics by Alfred Uhry and music by Robert Waldman.

Directed by Ronald Danko of the Hartnell drama department, the local production stars Michael Reed as the Robber Bridegroom; beautiful Rosamund is Ester Harp; Robert Fogg portrays the rich planter; and Pat Horsley plays the plotting stepmother.

Supporting cast members include Terry Beswick, Michael Kubik, Babak Mokhtari, Karen O'Grady, Pat Rose, Frank Olivas and Tim Solomon.

A special preview performance will be staged Thursday, May 3 at 8 p.m. with all seats $1.50.

Tickets, at $3.50 general admission or $2.50 for students, may be reserved through the Hartnell box office, Salinas 1-758-1221 or purchased at the door the night of the performance.

Additional performances will be staged May 11-12.

PIANIST RENEE BRONSON will appear in recital Sunday, May 6 at 3 p.m. in Sunset Theater, Carmel. Mrs. Bronson will present an all-Chopin program, including the B flat Minor Scherzo and the "Funeral March" Sonata.

Chopin lecture continues

Pianist William Corbett-Jones will give the third in his series of lecture-recitals on the work of Frederic Chopin Friday, May 4 at 4:15 p.m. in the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall, Monterey.

The programs examine the composer's life and times as well as the style and technique of his broad range of work. Several compositions not generally heard in the concert hall will be played and discussed.

Admission is $3 for each program. For more information, phone MPC Communities Services, 373-5522.

'Carmen' opens Friday at Hidden Valley Theatre

Carmen, one of the most challenging and thrilling operas ever written, will be the final production of the Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble 1979 season. Opening night is Friday, May 4 at the Hidden Valley Theatre in Carmel Valley.

The opening night performance is reserved for members of the Hidden Valley First Nighter's Club. Tickets, at $16 ($8 tax deductible), include a gala champagne reception with members of the cast and orchestra after the performance.

The opera is the romantic story of Carmen, a fiery gypsy girl who teases and captivates, then leaves the corporal, Don Jose.

James Lucas, stage director for the production, says "Carmen is a very involved opera to stage. The beautiful music, complex characters and involved production requirements have combined to make it among the 10 most often produced operas since its introduction in Paris in 1875."

Lucas comes to Hidden Valley from his home in New York City, where he has staged the opera many times, including productions in Philadelphia, New Orleans, Central City, Colo., and Puerto Rico.

Musical director for the Opera Ensemble is David Effron, who is here from the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., where he is conductor of the orchestra. Effron has also been artistic director of the Central City Opera in Denver; head of conducting programs at the Curtiss School of Music, and guest conductor for the San Francisco Opera, New York City Opera and Cologne Opera.

Rebecca Mercer-White and Pat Schuman will alternate in the role of Carmen; Neil Breeden and James Anderson will share the role of Don Jose; Lisbeth Lloyd and Jane Olian will portray Micaela; and Escamillo will be performed by Richard Fey and Peter Atherton.

The Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble selects 20 young singers each year by competitive audition to perform and study during the seven-month program. The singers live on the Hidden Valley campus and are immersed in a rigorous schedule of study and performance, six days a week.

The Hidden Valley production of Carmen will be sung in English and performed with full orchestra and chorus. Performances are scheduled Friday and Saturday, May 4-5 at 8 p.m. Carmen will also be staged May 11-13, 24-27, 31 and June 1-3. All evening performances begin at 8 p.m.; Sunday matinees curtain at 2:30 p.m.

Tickets, at $8 for adults and $5 for juniors (14 and under) are available at the Hidden Valley box office or at The Record Cove, Monterey; How to Do Anything Bookstore, Carmel; Lily Walker Records, Pacific Grove; Countrywide Crafts, The Barnyard; Gadsby's Music, Salinas.

For additional information, phone Hidden Valley, 659-3115.

TWO LOVELY sopranos will share the title role of the Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble production of Bizet's Carmen. Rebecca Mercer-White (left) sings the fiery gypsy role at the Friday night opening, May 4. Patricia Schuman takes the role Saturday evening. Both performances begin at 8 p.m. at the Hidden Valley Theatre in Carmel Valley.

Choral Society, Orchestra to perform

Symphony concert will feature Strauss

Die Fledermaus, the gay Viennese operetta by Johann Strauss, will be performed in the final concerts of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra 1978-79 season, Sunday through Tuesday, May 6-8. The Monterey Peninsula Choral Society will join the symphony in a concert version of the light opera under the baton of music director and conductor Haymo Taeuber.

The concert is scheduled Sunday at King Hall, Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey; Monday at Sunset Theater, Carmel; and Tuesday at Sherwood Hall, Salinas. All concerts begin at 8 p.m.

Die Fledermaus, considered one of Strauss' finest comic operas, is a three-act tale of harmless flirtation and mistaken identities. Herr Eisenstein, a banker, attends a masquerade party to enjoy himself before a short stay at the city jail. He tells the story of his friend, Falck, who was disguised as a bat (Fledermaus) at a previous masquerade, drank heavily and fell asleep in the street. Falck awoke to the jeers of a street crowd.

Falck's revenge provides a humorous background to the events that lead to a confrontation between the banker and his wife, Rosalinda.

Soprano Gaelyn Gabora, who recently completed successful tours of Europe, North America and the Soviet Union, will sing the lead role of Rosalinda.

Supporting cast members include mezzo-soprano Linda Purdy, a Monterey resident who was an award-winner at the Metropolitan Regional Auditions in San Francisco; bass William Ramsey, director of choral activities at Stanford University and a soloist with the Carmel Bach Festival; tenor Daniel Parkerson, a Bay Area performer who recently returned from a concert tour of the Masterworks Chorale in Europe; and Bay Area tenor Mitchel Neufeld, who will perform dual roles.

Admission for the Monterey and Salinas concerts is $6 for adults and $2 for students.

Tickets are available at The Record Cove, Monterey; Lily Walker Records and Music, Pacific Grove; Carmel Music, Carmel; recreation offices on military posts; and at the box office on the night of the performance.

Limited seating is available for the Sunset Theater concert. Prospective concert-goers may place their name on a waiting list and are advised to arrive one hour before the performance. To submit your name, phone the concert association at 624-8511.

Filipino Showcase Fri. in Monterey

Filipino Showcase '79, a program that will combine the voices of the Siena Glee Club and Letran College Male Chorale of the Philippines, will appear Friday, May 4, at the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey. The concert begins at 8 p.m. and will be followed by a dance at 10 p.m. with music provided by Roy Leano and his Band.

The Showcase will spotlight Filipino Tagalog folk songs, religious and classical works by Handel, plus a medley of songs and dances by the Beatles and Michele Legrand.

The Siena Glee Club was first prize winner in the 1976 National Music Competition for Young Artists sponsored by the Music Foundation of the Philippines. The glee club, together with the all-male Letran College Chorale, has performed at the Phil-Am Auditorium, the Meralco Theater and the Cultural Center of Manila and the outer provinces.

Proceeds will benefit the Filipino Community Scholarship Fund.

Tickets, at $7.50, may be purchased at the door or reserved by phoning 624-6023 or 394-5919.

SOPRANO Gaelyne Gabora will perform in Die Fledermaus by Johann Strauss with the Monterey County Symphony, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 6-8. The orchestra will play three identical concerts in Monterey, Carmel and Salinas as the final performances of the 1978-79 season.

A resident of Mill Valley and New York City, Coblentz has written poetry, science fiction and historical essays for more than 40 years.

Arts & Leisure

WATERCOLORS of game birds by Jim Taylor are among the wide selection of fine art on view at Miner's Gallery Americana, Lincoln and Sixth, Carmel.

Pencil drawings on view

The pencil drawings of Steven Hubbard may be viewed at the Artist's Palette & Gallery, in The Barnyard, Carmel, through May 9.

The 22-year-old Hubbard is a realist who works primarily in pencil and watercolor. The 16 drawings at the Artist's Palette, which represents his first show, are black and white drawings; a few have a light color wash.

All depict weathered, wooden structures of a rural nature, mostly in a state of disrepair. Each drawing, in addition to the artist's signature and location of the building, reads "Phillippians 4:13" for the Bible scripture which the artist says has a strong influence in his life and work: "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me."

Some of the structures may look familiar to Peninsula viewers; there is a barn in Pacific Grove and an outbuilding near the Farm Center.

Hubbard, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hubbard of Monterey, attended Peninsula schools including Monterey Peninsula College. He received a bachelor of arts degree at California State University at Chico.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m.-5:30 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Sunday.

Mission Fiesta theme at Evans Gallery show

Carmel Mission Fiesta is the theme for a group show of handwoven crafts on display through May 30 at the Marjorie Evans Gallery, Sunset Center, Carmel. The Carmel Crafts Guild is sponsor of the annual exhibit.

A mission courtyard scene has been re-created with handwoven articles that include saddle blankets, rugs, tapestries, ponchos and shawls. A unique woven picture has been created in a tapestry by Joni Clayton of Carmel Valley Manor. Warp threads were painted to create an image in tapestry by Ginger and Amy Essick.

The exhibit was previously on view at the Northern California Handweavers' Conference in San Mateo County.

Visitors are welcome to view the display weekdays from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. There is no charge.

Joan Towers is Artist of Month of May

Joan Towers is Artist of the Month for May at the Carmel Foundation. Her oil landscapes will be displayed in the gallery of the activities building, Lincoln and Ninth, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. weekdays, and 2-5 p.m. weekends.

Mrs. Towers grew up in Los Angeles and was graduated from the Otis Art Institute. She recently moved to the area and works in a studio overlooking the Salinas Valley.

"Having always lived in the city," she says, "I find this new environment a source of constant discovery and challenge.

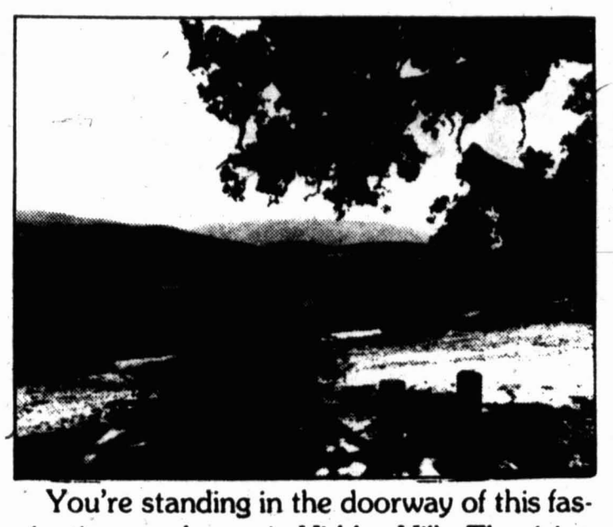
REAL ESTATE

Nearly 4 acres of this is yours!



You're standing in the doorway of this fascinating new house in Hidden Hills. The rising curve of McCarthy Road is just before you, and on the other side your acres sweep down to a valley and up toward the trees. Miles of hills stretch away to a horizon of mountains far across Carmel Valley.

The house is sheltered in vertical fir, earth-colored. A broad deck faces the fabulous view. Two wood-faced chimneys, from living room and master bedroom, stand above the cedar-shaked roof. A stately old oak shelters the entrance.

Actually, the house is four square units of varying sizes skilfully joined together. Each is topped by a sturdy assembly of beams rising to a central point. The largest, 27 x 27, contains the spacious living room and the dining room and kitchen separated by semi-partitions. Unique, narrow, dark-stained combed oak flooring stretches these spaces.

The second unit lies just east of this. It's 24 x 24, divided down the middle, and on either side is a bedroom and bath, with private decks off each. The master bedroom is in front and has a smaller arched brick fireplace, like the front room. Its bath includes dressing area, louvred closets, and a separate lavatory and sunken tub.

At the rear of the house is a 3rd module, 12 x 12, a well planned den with beamed ceiling and sliding doors leading to a secluded deck with a hot tub. On the other side is the 4th unit, the double garage, set several steps below the main house. A door leads from garage to the kitchen.

There are many welcome touches: large parking plaza, carved mahogany front door, Italian tile in entrance area, ceramic tile on kitchen counters, high quality built-ins, carpeted bedrooms and baths, special lighting fixtures, and that hot tub!

It's a little hard to find the first time, easy thereafter. Go to the top of Los Laureles Grade. Take Hidden Hills Road to McCarthy. Then follow it to its southern loop, and there you are. A private retreat with endless views, just minutes from Monterey, Salinas and Carmel. $142,500.
